Chabot Ultimatum To Labor, Bosses

PRINCE GEORGE (CP-Staff) — Labor Minister James Chabot today told the British Columbia construction industry and its 18 building trades unions to get moving on settlement of contract differences by June 7 or face government-ordered binding arbitration.

Chabot delivered his ultimatum in a telegram from this central B.C. city to the Construction Labor Relations Association which bargains for 840 contractors and the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, representing 30,000 building tradesmen locked out since April 28.

The minister gave both sides until next Wednesday to sign collective agreements, or accept appointment of a three-man arbitration board that "would resolve their differences."

"Unless they indicate to me by noon, June 7 that they are prepared to sign a collective agreement or accept my proposal, I will have no alternative but to refer the dispute to mediation for binding settlement," Chabot said later.

Chabot said his arbitration board proposal would allow the unions and the association to pick their own chairman. If they were unable to do this, one would be chosen for them.

The alternative to the board or ratification of a new collective agreement, said Chabot, is referral of the dispute to the controversial B.C. Mediation Commission which is empowered by the government to order the terms of a contract settlement.

The dispute, he added, is "having a very serious effect on the construction industry" and there is the possibility of a fall shortage of school and hospital space if it is allowed to continue.

The CLRA claims its lockout has halted work on about $500 million worth of construction. The association invoked the lockout after a wave of selective strikes by the building trades against individual contractors.

The unions held 44 separate collective agreements with the CLRA, all of which expired March 31. Union negotiators have demanded wage increases ranging between 16.8 and 34.4

Bombing Scare After Massacre At Lod Airport

Times News Service

TEL AVIV — An anonymous telephone call warned Israeli authorities today that explosives had been placed aboard an incoming jet liner, and Lod airport went on a special bomb alert less than 24 hours after Japanese gunmen hired by Arab guerrillas staged a bloody massacre there.

A caller told airport police that the explosives were aboard a TWA plane "arriving now." Two TWA planes were due at that moment—a Boeing 707 with 72 persons from Rome and a Boeing 747 jumbo with 118 persons from Frankfurt.

Both aircraft were isolated in a far corner of the airport complex and passengers evacuated.

The 707 was allowed to continue to Bombay after a search found no bombs. The passengers on the 747 were taken a safe distance from the aircraft to identify their luggage and have it searched.

Prime Minister Golda Meir hinted today at Israeli retribution against the Arab states who she says sent the neatly-dressed Japanese suicide squad to Lod Airport where they massacred men, women and children Tuesday night. She called it murder by messenger.

Another Israeli official termed the carnage "a massacre of the innocents."

The 74-year-old leader, her voice trembling with anger, also censured world governments for lax airport security and said the massacre could "easily have been prevented."

France, on whose national airline the gunmen arrived, condemned the terror attack. But the Paris government shot back a sharp retort to Mrs. Meir's comments on security.

"The French government can only express its surprise at certain official Israeli statements," government spokesman Jean Philippe

FLOOD CREST NEARS AT KEREMEOS

Times News Service

KEREMEOS — The Similkameen River continues to rise today as dog-tired volunteer workers wonder if 24 hours of labor on straining dikes will keep the rampaging waters from this community and the neighboring villages of Princeton, Cawston and Hedley.

A rise of between eight and 12 inches in the water level is expected today as 90-degree temperatures bring newly-melted water spilling off the mountains.

The many tributaries of the Similkameen and the Tulameen, which joins with it at Princeton are also in flood.

A number of residents on the outskirts of Hedley were evacuated late Tuesday when a swollen creek threatened their homes.

About 30 residents of the Cawston area and about 17 Keremeos homes were also evacuated.

At Princeton, where more than 500 volunteers worked on the dikes Tuesday, Mayor Dave Brown said the river level had dropped and "we're in the best position now that we've been in for the past 36 hours."

There has been heavy damage along the 60-mile stretch of the Similkameen between Princeton and Cawston. In many areas, the usual 100 to 200-foot-wide river channel is up to half a mile wide.

The biggest threat is at Keremeos. Dikes at the west end of the village seeped badly Tuesday and developed holes through which the water rushed.

Mayor Stan Pollard said if the dike breaks the entire business section of this village of 800 persons will be flooded. "Everyone is dog-tired," he said, "and we can't take much more."

Many of the Keremeos dike workers, about half of them high school students, got as little as one hour sleep Tuesday.

Mayor Pollard said he wants a state of emergency

Irish Guerrillas Step Up Violence

BELFAST (CP) — Irish guerrillas, smashing aside a growing peace movement, left a trail of bomb destruction across Northern Ireland today. Five more deaths, including two British soldiers, were reported.

The violence escalated a few hours after the Official wing of the Irish Republican Army Monday night renounced force of arms as a weapon to bring Ulster under the rule of the neighboring Republic of Ireland.

The bloodshed was clearly an assertion of power by the provisional arm of the IRA, which has pledged its fight will go on.

Some members of the Official IRA were reported switching to the Provisionals following their side's ceasefire.

About 40 young men were said to have made the move in Londonderry.

An unnamed senior British Army officer was quoted by the London Daily Express as saying: "They are hardened gunmen who went into it for a fight. They are not going to give up now."

TOLL NOW 332

The bombings and shootings which ravaged Ulster Tuesday carried the three-year death toll to 352. This year alone, 146 are known to have been killed.

Two soldiers died in hospital early today, one of injuries received when a fortified security post was blown up in Belfast, wounding four other soldiers and two civilians, none seriously.

The second soldier died after gunmen in a passing car shot him in the back as he was on patrol in an armored car in the Andersonstown road in Belfast.

The explosion in the heavily sandbagged army and police post in Springfield Road in western Belfast was caused by a bomb which was apparently smuggled inside the building.

NO INSURANCE HIKE FOR SOME

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

New insurance rates for some Greater Victoria drivers will not increase over last year's, but others will rise as high as 19 per cent.

Young drivers will experience the highest rate increases when they come into effect July 1, according to industry spokesmen.

It is also becoming clear that where no increases are apparent, the 37 reduction in no-fault coverage compulsory in British Columbia, will be wiped out by rises in other parts of a driver's insurance.

The rates are the first to be fully scrutinized by the B.C. automobile insurance board, a government body.

J. H. Glavin, chairman of the independent insurance conference, which includes about a quarter of the insurance companies in the province, released that groups' rates Tuesday.

Other rates as yet unreleased or still under scrutiny by the insurance board are expected to be in the same range as

Store Owner Shot to Death

By DOUG MACRAE
Times Staff

A Chinatown fish store owner was shot to death this morning in what police believe was a robbery attempt.

Frank S. Hong, 44, of Apt. 432-1830 Fern, was found in a pool of blood shortly after 8 this morning.

Hong operated Rainbow Fish Co., at 560 Fisgard in the heart of the city's tiny Chinese district.

A post-mortem was being conducted late this morning. Preliminary reports said Hong died of massive brain injuries as the result of one or more bullet wounds in the head.

Victoria fire department aided police in early investigation, operating a ladder truck as officers clambered over the three-storey, stone and stucco building which housed the fish market.

A police spokesman theorized that Hong was shot after he resisted an opening-time stick-up attempt.

GOLD HITS $60

LONDON (UPI) — The price of gold briefly touched $60 an ounce on the Swiss free market today in busy early trading and momentarily hit $59.75 an ounce in London. In Paris, it soared to $59.07, a new peak for France.

Later in the session, prices eased again.

Swiss dealers called today's market activity "completely crazy" and some predicted a heavy turnover for the session.

Dealers said the big price leap followed reported remarks by U.S. under secretary of the treasury Paul Volcker, taken out of context.

After a Geneva conference he reportedly told questioners another dollar devaluation could not be ruled out.

The basic reason for the recent price leap is the growing gap between gold production and its use by industry.

Subdivision Sparks Park Fight

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

The provincial government has approved plans for a large housing subdivision adjacent to Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach, despite opposition from the Alberni-Clayoquot Regional District.

One of the principal owners of the property at Chesterman's Beach is H. R. McDiarmid, Social Credit member for the riding.

The regional board recommended against the subdivision because directors feared sewage from septic tanks would contaminate the well water of nearby property owners, Mayor Bill Russell of Ucluelet said.

The subdivision is on low level land, and the water table in places is only a few inches below the surface, he said.

"To our amazement, the highways department and the health department approved the subdivision."

He criticized the government for failing to approve a regional board zoning plan to govern the development of unorganized territory near to the park.

The plan calls for incorporating unorganized territory between the park and the villages of Tofino and Ucluelet, on the west and east wings of the Long Beach area, into the two municipalities.

The two 3 1/2 miles strips of land are still under the jurisdiction of the government.

Chesterman's beach is near Tofino and some people wanted it included in the national park when it was established two years ago.

If the government approved the zoning plan for the area, the subdivision would have to conform to the bylaws like all others in the villages of Tofino and Ucluelet, Russell said.

He warned that shoddily built communities and disorganized development "of the worst kind" threaten the approaches to the park due to the inaction of the government.

"The government has been leasing land in the organized area contrary to the advice of the regional district," he said.

"At present there is nothing to prevent the establishment of junkyards and other developments not in keeping with the area along the highway to the park," he said. "We can only hold up development for 90 days."

Tofino and Ucluelet will eventually inherit the problems of the uncontrolled areas, he said.

ISRAEL THE BETTER HALF

By Bob Barnes

Lecat said following a cabinet meeting.

A police spokesman said the official death toll was 22 persons killed and 70 wounded in the violence in which the Japanese took sub-machine guns and hand grenades from their suitcases and opened fire on a crowd of 300 persons, many of them Puerto Ricans on a pilgrimage to the holy land.

Reuters news agency however, said 26 were killed and 72 wounded, many critically. The Associated Press said 25 were killed and 78 injured.

Dr. Mordechai Shani, director of the Sheba Hospital, said 23 bodies were brought to his institution, and a spokesman at Bellinson Hospital said it had two.

They said two dead Japanese terrorists were not among the 25.

The suicide mission ended when one of the Japanese blew himself up with a grenade and another was shot and killed by a companion. The third man was captured.

Arab broadcasts said the Japanese were averting the death of two guerrillas shot and killed by Israeli soldiers during an abortive hijack at the airport early this month.

The Japanese identified themselves as members of a group called The Army of the Red Star.

Japanese police said no such organization exists, but the Japanese Kyodo news agency said it was an ultra-leftist radical organization of Japanese youths who tortured and killed 13 of their own members earlier this year in a purge of dissidents.

The Israeli newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth said the lone captive told his interrogators he had received training at an Arab guerrilla camp in an unidentified Arab country.

It quoted him as saying many other Japanese had undergone such training as part of a world revolution.

Travelers, relatives, bystanders and employees at the crowded airport were hit in Tuesday night's wild fusillade of gunfire and explosions, looted by the three gunmen who disembarked from a Paris-Rome-Tel Aviv flight, pulled weapons from their baggage and started shooting.

In Beirut, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine denied that the three were hired guns.

But the surviving terrorist was quoted as saying he did it for money.

Front sources spoke of them as "Japanese comrades" and said Arab elements belonging to the PFLP had taken part in the airport operations from inside Israel.

Eyewitnesses to the attack said the floor of the customs hall was scattered with the limbs of dismembered bodies, pools of blood coagulated on the marble paving stones, shattered glass and broken doors lay everywhere.

There was total panic and confusion as people rushed around in all directions, some crying, some shouting hysterically, others too stunned to utter a sound.

Rhodesia Boot For U.K. Envoy

SALISBURY (AP) — The Rhodesian government announced today the expulsion of the British government's representative, Alec Ward.

A statement said Ward has been asked to leave Rhodesia because the British government has turned down a Rhodesian ultimatum that he would have to leave unless Rhodesia was allowed to have a representative in London.

"I must be starved... This stuff tastes delicious!"

Detectives pulled in a dozen habitues of park benches in the China town neighborhood. All were released after questioning, and none was able to tell police of any unusual visitor to Hong's premises.

Calwell said there was no sign of a struggle.

"We're speculating that whoever did it came and went through the back door," he said.

A business-man neighbor said Hong normally arrived at his shop at 7:45 a.m. and opened for business at 8 a.m. The body was found by Lum when he dropped in for a usual morning chat at 8:09 a.m.

Police investigation is being carried out by detectives Ken Horsman and Edward Hardy.

Hong's wallet was found beside the body on the floor. Neighboring businessmen said Hong didn't carry large amounts of cash on his person normally.

A small office safe was found to have its outside door open, but a second door inside was still locked.

The till was closed, and fingerprint experts said it apparently had not been touched by Hong's assailant.

Tehran Blasts Disrupt Nixon Visit

Times News Service

TEHRAN — A rash of bombs hit Tehran today, killing an Iranian woman, breaking both legs of a U.S. Air Force general and delaying President Nixon's schedule by 45 minutes.

An explosion occurred about 100 yards from the site of the President's final public appearance in Iran, at the tomb of the father of the Shah of Iran, where Nixon was to place a wreath. The bomb was made up of two sticks of dynamite.

Nixon's motorcade was delayed, but he went ahead with his appearance at the tomb and then left for Warsaw, Poland.

Police charged that the bombings were the work of Iran's Marxist guerrilla movement which has been waging a two-year bomb-and-bullet campaign against the shah's regime.

Baghdad radio, in neighboring Iraq, has been calling on all "patriotic Iranians" to disrupt Nixon's visit. The Iraqi regime in angered by U.S. support of Israel and is also contending with Iran for dominance in the Persian Gulf area.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said the explosions were carried out by a small band of terrorists but said he was satisfied they were not directed at the life of President Nixon.

Asked if there was an attempt to assassinate the president, Ziegler said "absolutely not."

Explosions in an alley smashed windows at the office of the U.S. Information Service.

Brig-Gen. Harold Price, an adviser to the Iranian Air Force, was badly injured when the car in which he was travelling hit an explosive device in the road near the centre of Tehran.

Ziegler said a woman in the street was killed and another passer-by injured by the car blast.

In Warsaw Nixon arrived to a colorful welcome for a final stopover, before returning home and reporting to Congress on his eight days at the Moscow summit.

The president leaves Warsaw Thursday, and after his arrival in the evening he will go directly from Andrews Air Force Base to the capitol for a 6:30 p.m. PDT report to a joint session of Congress on his mission to Moscow.

Nixon, in a rare foray into another language, called "Soleim, Zoonierze" (greetings, soldiers) to an 81-man honor guard assembled at the airport.

per cent on base rates that go from $5.72 to $6.45 hourly for skilled tradesmen.

The CLRA, in its last offer, proposed an increase that averaged 6.5 per cent for all union members. Talks have been held sporadically since the lockout began, but no progress has been reported.

Opposition to Chabot's ultimatum came quickly and bitterly today from Building Trades Council president Jim Kinnaid.

Kinnaid said Chabot had assured him as recently as Monday that neither he (Chabot) nor the premier would interfere in the dispute.

"In light of those discussions, the ultimatum rather astounding me," Kinnaid said.

He also charged that the government is coming to the rescue of CLRA, which has been experiencing "fallings" in its lockout.

"The lockout could have been broken by the unions but CLRA seems to have gotten together with the government to try to take the dispute to compulsory arbitration."

Kinnaid said the building trades "have made it quite clear that we will not accept binding arbitration. We just won't appear before the mediation commission."

He said CLRA's next move will be to stall the negotiations until June 7 to allow the minister to take the dispute to compulsory arbitration.

"They won't bargain now. They have achieved the position they wanted and will just wait until the 7th."

Vancouver Island Building Trades Council president John Schibli said today Chabot's ultimatum is "a doublecross."

He referred to the Monday meeting with Chabot and said the building trades had been assured the government would not interfere "and here it is two days later and the minister comes out with this stuff."

Schibli said the government is "bailing out" CLRA, which was "falling apart" as a result of the unsuccessful lockout situation.

The minister's proposals, said Schibli, are "totally unacceptable."

CLRA president C. J. Connaghan said today CLRA will not attempt to stall the negotiations just to reach the June 7 deadline and compulsory arbitration.

"We will certainly continue to make every effort over the next seven days to achieve settlements, just as we have been doing all along," he said.

Connaghan said a large number of meetings are scheduled for the rest of this week but that negotiation with the province's electrical workers broke down Tuesday.

"We, in the end, will have to service these areas with water and other services."

Russell said the villages wanted planned development in the unorganized area to preserve the quality of living and the environment.

"There's a place for everything," he said. "We certainly don't want to repeat the mistakes of some urban communities on the east coast of the island," he added.

But he said the regional district has received no co-operation from the government.

"It does 'things over our heads,'" he said.

Leslie McKinnon, chairman of the Alberni-Clayoquot regional district, said the zoning plan is vital to control haphazard development in the Long Beach area.

"The whole area is in for a lot of trouble unless the plan is approved," he stated.

He said Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell has sat on the zoning plan since January.

"I still hope the minister will approve it," he said.

FIVE 'GRIPERS'

When the zoning plan was first submitted to the minister, Campbell said he would delay its approval because there were some objections.

"I don't see why he should delay a plan for a small group of gripers," McKinnon said. "McDiarmid is the main one. Campbell seems to only want to listen to this small group."

He said the minister was asked two months ago to impose a freeze on development in the unorganized areas of Long Beach until a zoning plan had been approved.

"We have received no reply," he said. "It burns me up. We spent considerable money on preparing a zoning plan for the whole district."

A Simple Farewell From France

BENSON, England (AP) — The body of the Duke of Windsor was flown today to England from Paris where the former king died Sunday after 36 years of virtual exile.

Senior officers of the RAF accompanied the coffin during the 55-minute flight to Benson RAF base.

The Duchess of Windsor did not accompany the body of her 77-year-old husband who abdicated as King Edward VIII in 1936 in order to marry her.

She has been suffering from strain and is expected to remain in Paris until Friday, when she will travel to London as a guest of the Queen at Buckingham Palace.

The departure from France was simple and dignified.

A French Air Force guard of honor presented arms as eight British airmen transferred the duke's oak coffin from a black hearse on to an RAF VC-10 jet aircraft.

The ceremony took place on a windy stretch of tarmac half a mile from the bustling passenger terminal at Le Bourget airport. There were no crowds to watch the brief departure ceremony at the airport's military base.

We'll Parley If Offer Made—Forest Workers

Workers in B.C.'s forest industry are ready to negotiate with management as soon as the industry comes up with "a genuine counter-proposal," International Woodworkers of America regional president Jack Moore said Tuesday.

In a telegram to Labor Minister James Chabot, Moore urged Chabot to get Forest Industrial Relations — bargaining for the industry — to propose "What they believe to be a reasonable settlement."

"You will appreciate that FIR's refusal to do that amounts to its assuming the power to dictate what our demands will be, and that, as representatives of the people who formulate those demands, we cannot accept that," Moore said.

The IWA leader said recent changes in the value of the Canadian dollar and the "very large recent price increases" in B.C. wood products make it easier for the industry to meet IWA demands.

"The industry's behavior in negotiations indicates the arrogance that they feel towards the people of this province," said Moore. "Anyone who has had to buy lumber, plywood or shingles recently is aware of how the public is being gouged."

The forest industry contract expires in just over two weeks, with 25,000 workers affected.

About 800 fallers in the industry remain off the work as wildcat strikes continue. The walkouts started April 18 as fallers sought a standard pricing formula for their work.

As a result, the supply of logs has been drying up at coast forest operations and several hundred men have been laid off.

Moore's telegram to Chabot, who is still with the cabinet tour in the B.C. interior to Victoria until Thursday, and is not expected to return, followed a warning from a forest company executive that the province's premier industry is heading into a period of labor chaos and anarchy.

Richard C. Nelson, executive vice-president of Crown

Zellerbach Canada Ltd., told a service club in Vancouver that there are significant signs that the collective bargaining process has been damaged beyond repair in the forest negotiations.

The dispute centres around 44 IWA demands, including an across-the-board wage increase of $1 an hour on the current base rate of $3.72 an hour.

FIR has made no counter-proposal, saying the demand would cost the industry more than $136 million in the first year.

The negotiations for coast forest employees set the usual pattern for other B.C. forest workers. Southern interior woodworkers, numbering about 7,000, have their contract expire at the end of June and the 3,000-man northern interior labor force has a renewal date of August 31.

'Smart' Bombs Zero on Vinh

SAIGON (CP) — U.S. Navy fighter-bombers, using electronic "smart" bombs with TV nose cameras for pinpoint accuracy, launched an aerial campaign to isolate Vinh, the big coastal city midway between Hanoi and the demilitarized zone, military spokesmen said today.

Pilots from the carrier Midway said they knocked out the Tho Tuong railway bridge 10 miles southwest of Vinh with two of the 1,100-pound high explosive bombs.

The glide bomb carries in its nose a television camera that relays pictures back to a screen in the plane. When the bomb focuses on the target, the pilot keeps it on course by transmitting electronic signals to four tail fins that steer it.

Military sources say the "smart" bombs are accurate within five feet, while bombs with no electronic guidance may be as much as 150 feet off.

Vinh is a major trans-shipment point for war supplies moving into South Vietnam to support the North Vietnamese offensive now beginning its third month.

Waves of navy jets from three carriers in the Tonkin Gulf concentrated their raids around Vinh on Tuesday.

BRIDGE KNOCKED OUT
Pilots said they also knocked out the Tam Da rail bridge 11 miles north of the city and cut the rail tracks to the northern approach of the Dien-Chau rail-bridge eight miles farther north.

The Duc Lam highway bridge 34 miles southeast of Vinh was reported damaged.

Officers said the objective is to cut Vinh off from the rest of North Vietnam and attack war materials already there for shipment to the South. U.S. planes already have mined the harbor.

In Washington, the Pentagon claimed that U.S. bombing has cut "close to zero" the flow of supplies from China by rail.

The battle fronts in South Vietnam were reported generally quiet, with the exception of Kontum, in the central highlands.

The Saigon command said 175 North Vietnamese troops were killed in fighting in and around the city Tuesday. South Vietnamese losses were 31 killed and 89 wounded, the command said.

MEDIATOR TO CONTINUE

Mediator Clark Gilmour said today his term has been extended to June 7 in negotiations between Victoria Press Ltd. and the five unions which produce the Victoria Times and Daily Colonist.

Both sides have been meeting this week and meetings are scheduled for Thursday, Gilmour said.

"After that, we'll just play it by ear."

There are 330 union members involved in the contract dispute. All five unions have approved strike action but no strike notice has been served.

NATO Talks Agreed On Force Cut

BONN (CP) — The 15 member states of NATO today formally agreed to enter preparatory talks for a European security conference. (See also Page 20)

All of them except France also proposed that "multilateral explorations on mutual and balanced force reductions be undertaken as soon as practicable."

These discussions would be "either before or in parallel with" the talks about a security conference, which would take place in Helsinki this fall, said a communique issued at the end of the two-day meeting here of the NATO foreign ministers.

American State Secretary William Rogers told a press conference that the holding of the talks about a force-reduction conference is not considered by Washington to be a pre-condition for the security conference, which has long been sought by the Russians.

Asked whether prospects for the security conference might be weakened if the Soviet Union dragged its feet on the arms reduction meeting, Rogers said the U.S. has every reason to feel that the Soviets would not adopt such tactics.

Airlines Declare War

FLORENCE, Italy (UPI) —

Scheduled airlines for years have sought a way to win back the passengers they were losing to the charter companies.

Tuesday they found one. Undersell them.

At the same time they found an equally simple sounding way to halt illegal sales of their own tickets at discount prices. They will no longer sell blocks of tickets to travel agencies at cut rates.

"We want the public to understand scheduled airlines will give the best possible fare deal and they will not be undersold," a spokesman for the International Air Transport Association said.

The decisions made at the 83rd meeting of the IATA executive committee amounts to a declaration of war.

IATA estimates its members lost up to $1 billion last year through illegal sales of cut-rate tickets. An official only threw up his hands when asked how much business scheduled airlines lose to charter companies.

DOH WORKERS WALK OFF

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Department of Highways workers — members of the British Columbia Government Employees union — walked off the job in the Kamloops area today.

A one-day work stoppage will protest the province's 6.5-per-cent ceiling on wage increases.

It was not known how many workers are involved, but they include road crews, truck drivers and some office staff.

Atrocities Listed

BUJUMBURA (Reuter) — At least 50,000 people died in a wave of massacres in Burundi after a coup attempted last April 29, with men being crucified, pregnant women have their stomachs slashed open and young children being held aloft on spears.

These, according to the official radio in this tiny East African state, were some of the atrocities committed by about 10,000 rebels who fought government forces after the coup attempt.

The government-controlled radio station of Burundi, Voice of the Revolution, gave Tuesday what it described as the truth about events in this country in the last month.

Apart from 50,000 bodies so far recovered, people were still missing and more had fled to Tanzania and Zaire.

The radio said documents recovered from some of the rebels showed that the plan was to overthrow the government of President Michel Micombero and "systematically exterminate" the ruling Tutsi tribal people, who have long been the country's ruling elite.

Wherever they attacked, they first mutilated or killed younger children, carried out "unqualifiable atrocities" against the women, knifed open the stomachs of pregnant women, crucified or decapitated the men.

The radio said the Tutsi authorities had punished all the rebels they could catch. Some had been killed on the field of battle, others after being tried. But there had been no mass reprisals against the Hutus, as some foreign newspapers had reported, the radio said.

A Move to Improve

In dealing with the proposed sign bylaw amendments of its planning committee, City Council will find that it is much easier to draw up ideal provisions than it is to get them into the law book. Nearly a decade ago, when the present bylaw was passed, it took months of effort to achieve even minimal improvements in the jungle of advertising signs which afflicted the city.

The bylaw now in effect is described today by an outdoor advertising spokesman as satisfactory to all sides. He does not mention that this bylaw was passed by Council only after half a dozen versions were beaten down by the industry as being too stringent. The better versions were whittled away because the Council of the day could not stand up under the high-pressure attacks of the sign industry.

Experts were brought in to lead the battle against the city planner's attempts to clear the downtown streets and roofs of the forest of conflicting signs which not only spoiled the view but obstructed each other. Some of the improvements which the city could not achieve at that time were successfully implemented by Saanich, to its great benefit. But there have been periodic attempts to whittle the sign bylaws in Saanich as well as in Victoria. Constant vigilance has been necessary to hold even the gains that have been made.

It is easily predictable that the sign industry will lay on its heaviest offensive if the issue is now to be opened again. But Alderman Young and his committee should have every support from Council and the public in an effort to win a still better visual environment for the city.

The retail disasters predicted when the 1963 amendments were put into effect simply did not occur. Each advertiser was treated equally with the others. The improvement in the downtown area was appreciated by the public and the whole city scene has been the better for what was done. But there are areas which still need drastic improvement, streets along which a hodge-podge of large and garish signs defeats the purpose of the advertising and spoils the environment in the process.

As a tourist resort city and a community which prides itself on its residential amenities it is time for Victoria to take a further step towards the standards which some enlightened communities already have imposed. It will be interesting to see how today's Council conducts itself in the test ahead, and to whom it will listen. The public should not leave it to fight alone.

With Permission

Although it is not a subject anyone likes to dwell upon, it is as natural a life process as birth. The subject of death, or more particularly, euthanasia, was raised by the outgoing president of the B.C. Medical Association, in convention in Penticton, the other day. Said Dr. Walter Anderson: "Everyone should have the right while they are of sound mind and judgment to give legal authority not to prolong their life beyond the point where there is any meaning to it."

While the patient would give authority, the doctors would perhaps be in the best position to decide or advise when a situation looked hopeless. They would judge when medical science had done all it could, keeping in mind the possible invention, or ready dispensation, of curative drugs or techniques.

The problem of euthanasia is not confined to ethical debates within a single profession. It involves us all and should be considered by the whole community of man. History shows that ancient civilizations — and some more modern — had their own approaches to the matter. There are precedents for voluntary death with dignity.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Can the Crackpots Be Right?

Jack Davis, guardian of the Canadian environment and one of the ablest men in our politics, still has a lot to learn about his job (the same being equally true of everyone else). At a recent Liberal convention in British Columbia he dismissed as ridiculous a resolution in favor of zero economic growth and the convention, naturally, rejected it. Instead, he promised the nation more goods, higher living standards and less pollution. But he did not mention, and perhaps did not know, the cost of this grand desideratum.

In Canada, to be sure, there is no immediate physical limit on economic growth, though there are serious obstacles in human behavior. We have all the necessary ingredients, the fertile earth, the forests, the minerals, the petroleum, the three teeming oceans and the skills. Moreover, we have such an appetite for economic growth that it is a political imperative, almost unanimously accepted. Can you imagine a politician running for office on an opposite proposition, a pledge to reduce our living standards, a policy of guaranteed austerity?

Obvious Impossibilities

In the world as a whole, on the other hand, unlimited economic growth, ever-increasing affluence and a clean environment are obviously impossible as things are going now — impossible because population grows faster than production, because the planet's raw resources are limited and because industrialization almost always means pollution in one form or another.

This is not Mr. Davis' responsibility. He is concerned with Canada, the richest land, per capita, in the world and probably the most fortunate. But as he well knows, the problem of depletion and pollution cannot be solved by any nation alone. The poisoned oceans lap every shore. The toxic atmosphere recognizes no national boundary. The impoverishment of other nations, as they eventually deplete their resources through increasing population and consumption, must affect even the rich Canadian economy later on, since it lives mainly on exports to foreigners who can afford to buy its goods.

Whether the Club of Rome and its computers are right in concluding that the world will be short of materials and full of pollution at the end of the century, or sooner, is too large a subject for discussion here. But if the computers are wrong in detail, as they doubtless must be, they have revealed, in general, the most important discovery in all mankind's experience — the discovery that our tiny cosmic speck cannot forever support man's excessive demands upon it. Compared to this discovery most of obscure Liberals in British Columbia are ridiculous enough to question these guarantees, they are written off as hardly better than well-meaning crackpots.

So, of course, they are in what we call practical politics but at least they have vaguely grasped some facts far larger than the next election, or the ambitions of any government or opposition. They seem to have guessed, too, that these facts will force us eventually to reconsider the premises on which all our political, economic and social plans are built.

The time for basic reconsideration has not arrived in Canada yet because it still has plenty of resources and less pollution, so far, than most countries. Even in our bountiful estate, however, the mere financial expense of preserving it will be higher than any politician is likely to admit, during an election year anyhow. We have hardly begun to pay the cost of a clean environment through taxes, or through the price of goods, or both.

If that were the only cost we could absorb it without serious hardship by putting more of our money, energy and intelligence into conserving our primary capital, less into daily consumption. Unfortunately there are other costs, suddenly discovered in Sweden, that famous clinic of social experiment and unflinching progress.

There, The Times of London reports, a group of eminent psychiatrists, commissioned by the worried government, has found that Europe's most affluent society is in desperate non-economic trouble.

Swedish Example

As The Times summarizes the commission's verdict, Sweden has created "a harsh, ruthless society which asks its citizens to sacrifice their mental well-being by working ever harder to pay for exorbitantly-priced flats and consumer goods ... The style of life in the so-called super-industrialized society leads to a prodigious human-crushing process" of which nervous tension, insanity, alcoholism, boredom and other symptoms are now clearly visible. They are not quite invisible in North America, either.

Sweden has thus encountered a law of diminishing returns, not economic but psychic and somehow overlooked by the politicians and economists. More goods, it appears, do not necessarily mean more happiness. Economic growth alone does not necessarily solve all the problems of the queer human creaturehood. Affluence, however desirable up to a point, fails to answer everything.

This should not surprise anyone who has read history and the thoughts of ancient philosophers, rather more reliable than our current practitioners. But it seems to surprise Mr. Davis, a highly competent economist and administrator whose business is practical, not philosophical. He, like the rest of us, will face many more surprises before long. Then, perhaps, the crackpots of British Columbia may not look quite as cracked as they look today.

our past assumptions are no longer relevant and many of our present ones already obsolete.

Yet the Canadian politicians all assure us that everything will be all right, our income forever rising and our environment fully protected, so long as we vote for the right party. And when some

Gabriola Island Case

For those of your readers who have not been able to follow too closely the above case, perhaps I could to advantage go over certain salient points.

A public hearing was held on April 19 on Gabriola Island. The question raised: Whether a land-use contract should be granted. Wildwood's Estates Ltd. for a large-scale subdivision at Santa Bay. The parcel of land in question is often referred to as Jenkin's Farm. It comprises 244 acres and Wildwood's proposal is to divide it into 550 lots.

On the night of the hearing, the island residents, including Wildwood's Estates employees living on the island, turned out in full force. Also, summer residents and property owners not living on the island came from Victoria and over from Vancouver to be present. In addition, Wildwood's representatives made a special trip over from the mainland for the occasion.

This made for a situation where everyone seemed to be well represented. The hall was packed, with those unable to get seats lining the walls. The hearing was extremely ably chaired. Orderly procedure was maintained throughout and briefs were presented in a dignified manner. All who wished to express an opinion or read a brief were given every opportunity to do so.

When the hearing was over a middle-aged resident excitedly exclaimed that it was the first time he had seen democracy in operation.

The results of the hearing: An overwhelming rejection of any land-use contract being granted for any such subdivision, coupled with a firm request that there be a cooling-off period (two to five years was mentioned) to enable the Regional Planning Board to come up with a Master Plan.

The Gulf Islands are unique. They form one of the most beautiful island-chains in the world. They could, and should, be a most treasured possession of which both British Columbia and the whole of Canada were proud. With green belts, wilderness areas, and parklands fully developed yet cleverly integrated to handle normal growth that preserved the quality of life, they could offer for posterity endless rewarding pleasure to those on holiday, and a haven from the rat-race to those who could remain longer.

Gabriola Island is considered one of the loveliest among her island sisters. That she should be allowed to become an unplanned, blighted suburban sprawl — which the Santa Bay blueprint spells — would be a heinous crime.

The most recent event is that, on some flimsy technicality, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell was served with an official notice of appeal by Wildwood's Estates Ltd., and this has led to a second hearing being called.

This means that the question that now evolves is not just to decide the fate of Jenkin's Farm, but whether the juggernaut of Big-Time land developers can move onto an island, carve it up, completely despoil its natural environment, and then move off, all for the sake of making a quick million.

On the evening of the second hearing, namely June 24, it will be democracy itself that will be on trial. — Joan Bloomfield, Gabriola Island.

(Editor's Note: The legislation provides for an appeal to the Minister and would be equally available if required by opponents of the subdivision scheme.)

To Trim Medicare Costs

TORONTO — The problem of controlling soaring health care costs, now that the state pays for almost everything, is politically ticklish. Unless a government is prepared to fix professional incomes and limit public accessibility — and what government is? — it must rely on subtler and sometimes ingenious devices to do the job for it.

Two examples of this are now being assayed by the Ontario Minister of Health, Dr. Richard Potter. One is a bill to licence all medical laboratories, including those in hospitals, where tests for the purposes of diagnosis or treatment are performed. The other is an amendment to the Pharmacy Act to permit druggists, in certain circumstances, to substitute cheaper products than those prescribed by physicians.

Both measures should have a deflationary effect on health costs and the only complaint that can be levied against them is that they should have been tried years ago. This is not Dr. Potter's fault; he has only been in his job some four months. But the fact remains that both steps are answers to problems which have been outstanding for at least four years and Dr. Potter's predecessors were either too conservative or too timid to do anything about it.

Counter-Attack

The bill to licence medical laboratories, for example, is really a government counter-attack on the financial impact of the trend to "machine medicine" which has been under way since the early 1960s. The government will determine how many medical labs are needed, what tests they shall be allowed to do, how their services shall be paid for and above all — who shall own them.

How "machine medicine" has exploded may be gathered from the records of Ontario's hospital care insurance program. In 1963 there were 979,036 patients under care in the province's hospitals and they had 1,089,645 X-ray diagnostic procedures performed upon them and 31,189,556 laboratory "units" of work done for them. By 1968 the number of patients had increased by only 15 per cent but the use of diagnostic radiology had increased by 48 per cent and the use of lab services by 124 per cent. Similar trends were apparent in the treatment of hospital out-patients.

Naturally the financial effect of these trends on hospital care costs was substantial but with the introduction of medicare, which pays doctors on a fee-for-service basis, it became astronomical. Doctors discovered there were all sorts of services they could perform for a fee.

An angiogram, for example (this is an X-ray procedure involving the injection of a dye) used to be done by the hospital radiologist as an insured hospital service. With the introduction of medicare, some neurologists and interlists began injecting the dye and charging for it; the radiologists then followed suit and soon the Ontario Medical Association tion tariff provided for a $40 to $50 fee which the government proceeded to pay without question.

The medical profession generally was not long in discovering that with medicare, "machine medicine" was a gold mine and there was no reason why the hospital labs should get all the action. By early 1968, over 200 Ontario companies had been incorporated to operate medical laboratories; almost invariably the shareholders are doctors, and it is common practice for a physician to "steer" a patient to a lab in which he has a financial interest. Medicare pays the bill.

Between 1968 and 1970, the last year for which figures are available, the utilization of hospital laboratory services increased by over 300 per cent although the patient load increased by only 16 per cent. By early 1971, 14 per cent of the services by doctors paid by medicare were "laboratory services", the largest category after office calls and hospital calls.

All this could have been held in check, and millions of dollars saved, if the government had acted early. But the Ontario Health Department refused even to admit that a problem existed. The Minister then, Dr. Matthew Dymond, alternated from approval to disbelief to shock, and finally appointed, very quietly, a committee to investigate, about which nothing more was heard.

The pugnacious Dr. Potter has gone to the heart of the matter: his bill will provide that no doctor in patient practice may have a financial interest in a medical laboratory to which he refers patients or specimens.

Long Overdue

Similarly — although the Ontario government generally does not pay for prescription drugs in its health insurance programs — the decision to give pharmacists the power to substitute when filling prescriptions is something that should have been done long ago. Because of the omission, the Ontario PARCOST program has had little or no effect on the cost of prescription drugs.

PARCOST is an arrangement between the Health Department and participating pharmacists (about 75 per cent of pharmacies in the province do participate) whereby the druggist agrees to sell at product cost plus a dispensing fee — currently a maximum of $2.20 per prescription. Products are listed on a price scale in the PARCOST Index after being tested and approved for quality and therapeutic value by a blue-ribbon committee of independent experts.

All doctors in the province get a copy of the Index and a moments perusal enables them to identify and prescribe the cheapest product or brand-name, with the assurance of the committee that unless otherwise indicated it is interchangeable with more expensive brands.

The trouble has been most doctors ignore the Index: "Too busy," said Dr. Potter. Others might think of other reasons. In any event, the pharmacist will now be allowed to substitute cheaper PARCOST products unless the prescription reads no substitution, and maybe the patient will now save some money.

From the Times of May 31, 1912:

Although the provincial press has devoted columns to the announcement of Premier McBride's return, a considerable portion of the public does not seem to have adequately appreciated the event. Although during his absence the number of chairs in the waiting room for the accommodation of callers has been increased there was no particular congestion there this morning. Possibly had they known that the aforementioned "waiters" chairs are much more comfortable than their predecessors, being more generously upholstered, they would have given them a larger measure of patronage.

Arms Pact History Is Not Encouraging

By JAMES EAYRS

If paradise for diplomats is being posted ambassador to some celestial city, purgatory is being delegated to some disarmament conference for all eternity. Such delegation is tortuous enough on earth, where a seasoned disarmament brings to the negotiations the patience of Job, the perseverance of Sisyphus, a butt made of iron.

Even these assets will not spare him depression at so much cant, so little control, at so much rhetoric, so few results. "I sometimes wonder if there is any other sphere of human activity in which so many fine words have been uttered," the delegate of Canada mused pensively after a pious intervention by the delegate of the United States during the 18-nation Disarmament Conference at Geneva in 1961, "and so little actually achieved as in the pursuit of disarmament and a stable peace."

To sustain him throughout the longeurs produced by obfuscating speeches in consecutive translation, a disarmament may reflect upon both the importance of his mission and its extreme difficulty. Nothing is harder for nations than beating their swords into plowshares. Everything conspires to make them accumulate more swords.

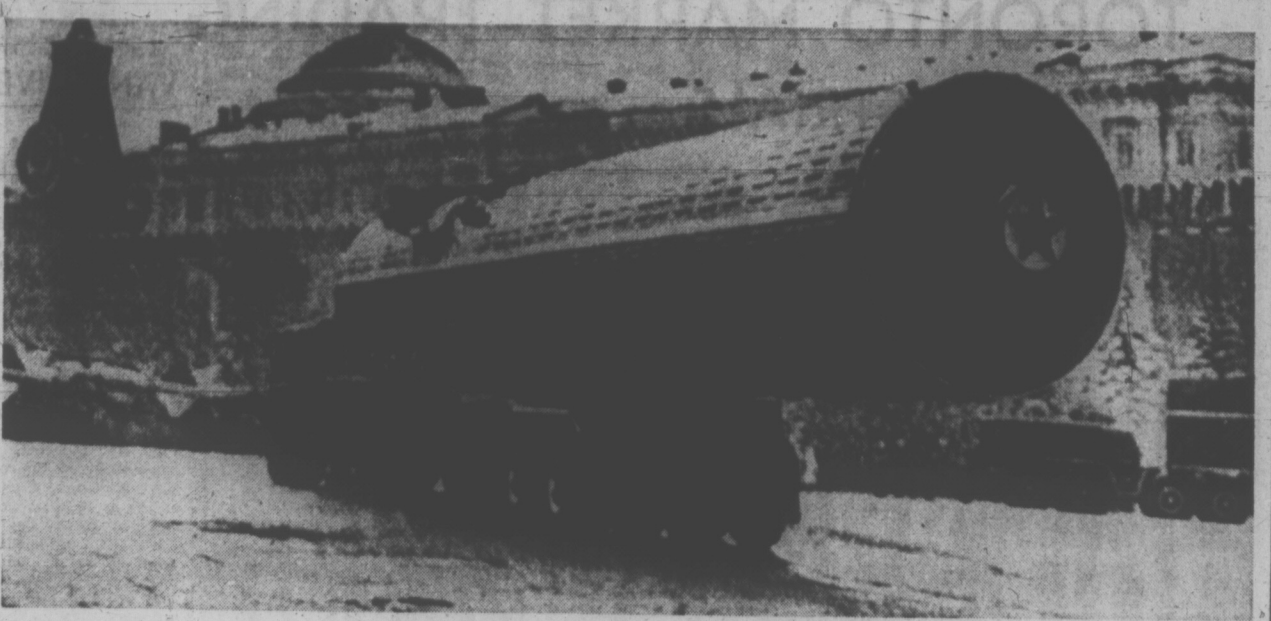

The military really don't want disarmament — any more than doctors if ruthlessly honest about it really want a race of wholly healthy humans or teachers really want minds fully stocked at birth. "The Air Ministry's opposition to the abolition of bombing," a Canadian military adviser was told by his British counterpart at the World Disarmament Conference forty years ago this week, "is a thoroughly selfish attitude . . .

If the bombing squadrons of the RAF were abolished, the necessity for a separate Air Ministry would largely disappear."

For no two states is the strategic environment the same. A weapon so much junk to one is the key to the survival of another. Medium-range missiles based in the United States reach Canada, Central America, the Caribbean — hardly threats to American security. Medium-range missiles based in the Soviet Union reach Western Europe, Eastern Europe, China. It is easy to see why a pact outlawing IRBMs has more appeal in Washington than in Moscow.

Seldom do states arrive at the same stage of weapons development at the same time. A Spanish delegate to a naval disarmament conference in the 1920s is said to have proposed that Spain and Great Britain freeze their fleets. The British delegate agreeing, it only remained to settle on a date for establishing the status quo. The British delegate proposed 1921. "Oh, no," rejoined the Spaniard. "Let's make it 1588."

The future is inscrutable, that of weapons particularly so. "I am all for using aeroplanes and tanks," the chief of the Imperial General Staff declared in 1925, "but they are only accessories to the man and the horse." That was eight years before scientists split the atom. The scientist Ernest Rutherford, whose brief sojourn at McGill we commemorate on a six-cent stamp, observed on learning of the successful fission: "There's no way of harnessing the energy." The practical consequences of the inscrutability of weapons innovation is to make already-overcautions governments more cautious still. They do not know, they play it safe — by writing escape clauses into the treaty in fine print. Tackling on qualifying protocols, perhaps refusing to sign.

These are some of the reasons why, until last week, the repertoire of successful arms limitation agreements was confined to a single act. On February 6, 1922, Britain, France, Italy, Japan and the United States signed a treaty placing restrictions on how they might develop their respective navies. On May 26, 1972, the Soviet Union and the United States signed a treaty placing restrictions on how they might develop their respective missile forces. Never in the half-century which intervened did nations find it possible to strike a comparable bargain.

Out of SALT — the strategic arms limitation talks, so far of 30 months' duration — has come some sanity at last. But there's a chance of a relapse. As at Washington in 1922, so at Moscow in 1972 — the disarmers have left their governments a loophole.

At Washington, the naval powers pledged themselves to hold their fleets in certain ratios, banned battleships above a prescribed tonnage. But about placing more firepower on smaller vessels their treaty remained silent.

Designers duly set to work. Soon pocket battleships were sliding down the ways. Along with champagne bottles were broken the pledges of statesmen. Naval rivalry broke out once more. So did a world war.

At Moscow, the super-powers have pledged themselves to hold their rocket forces to certain limits for missiles and for launchers. Each is allowed two ABM systems of 100 missiles each — one for the capital city, one for the offensive complex of its choice. The offensive missile force of each is fixed at present levels. But about placing more and bigger warheads on each missile, equipping each warhead so that it may home upon a separate target, their treaty, too, is silent.

To limit MRVs and MIRVs, as well as ICBMs and ABMs, one of two conditions must be met. Either perfect mutual trust that neither side will cheat — in which case no limitation would be needed, since no weapons would be needed. Or sufficient mutual trust to permit on-site distinct from satellite inspection. Such trust is not yet present.

Will the super-powers of the 1970s, like the naval powers of the 1920s, use the loophole they've created to evade the obligation they've imposed? Are they slowing down production just to speed up R and D? Is the MIRVed-up missile to follow the pocket battleship as bane of balance and stability, disturber of the peace? Or will mankind succeed in destroying its weapons before its weapons destroy mankind?

It could go either way. Like a pair of hostile paranoids in the early stages of chemotherapy, the Soviet Union and the United States are making contact with reality, more than in many years. Their fear and distrust are on the wane. They could grope their way toward a healthy relationship and a normal life. Or they could fall back into the crippling suspicions of the past. It is much too soon to tell.

Still, the super-powers of the 1970s have one thing going for us that the naval powers of the 1920s lacked. That is the example of the naval powers of the 1920s. Arms controllers who do not remember the past are condemned to repeat it — and all of us along with them.

THE FOREST ROADBLOCK

How Much for Parks?

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

The Council of Forest Industries was accused some time ago of deliberately trying to thwart attempts to create more and better parks throughout the province. The charge was levelled by B.C. deputy minister of recreation and conservation Lloyd Brooks, the top bureaucrat in Ken Kiernan's department.

"Every time someone proposes a new park," he said, "the forest industry accuses the people wanting more outdoor recreation of being greedy. This is being deliberately done to head off the growing public demand for more parks."

Brooks went on to make an interesting point. Less than one per cent of B.C.'s productive publicly-owned forest land is protected from the massive machines of the forest industry. Easily, Brooks said, the province could afford to have two or three per cent under reserve.

It should be noted that there are forestry experts who admit privately that as much as five per cent of the forest land could be held in reserve without affecting the profits of the forest industry. It's not a lot to ask for.

But the mild-mannered deputy minister of recreation was only asking for two or three per cent instead of the measly one per cent. "We are beginning to realize that an acceptable environment needs more than just the existing parks," he said. "We never set aside enough parkland to satisfy the demand."

The day after the deputy minister spoke, Kiernan announced that a survey of potential parkland in northern B.C. would be conducted this summer.

He indicated that parkland in the eastern Interior might be "traded off" to forest companies in return for land to be used as parks in the north. But no more land would be put under reserve.

Asked whether he endorsed the views of his deputy about the forest industry, Kiernan wiggled around the issue by saying the word "greedy" would never be used when talking about either the forest industry or the public.

Scored cabinet ministers are not famous for their denunciation of the lucrative forest industry.

Yet Kiernan was in a bind. He couldn't come out and say anything like: "The forest industry has an inalienable right to rip off all the forest it wants." It would hardly do for a recreation and conservation minister to come down so shamelessly on the side of industry.

On the other hand, it wouldn't do for the Secords to appear to be coming down shamelessly on the side of the public either. On to the scene bounced Resources Minister Ray Williston, leaping to the defence of the forest companies. Unlike Kiernan, he doesn't even have to pretend to be concerned with anything other than the encouragement of industrial growth.

Interestingly, one of deputy minister Brooks' criticisms of the forest industry was that whenever the subject of new parks comes up, the industry responds predictably, dragging out "the same old philosophy." In this case, industry did not even have a chance to dust off its copy of The Thoughts of Chairman Bullmoose. Williston was trucking it out on the spot. Tut, tut, can't start throwing around that radical kind of talk about more parks. Let Us Not Forget The Importance Of The Forest Industry To The Economy Of British Columbia.

If the forest industry doesn't have "enough land to fall back on," warned Williston, it might get into trouble economically, and then we all suffer. (What's good for the forest industry is good for B.C.) How often have we heard that line before?

What is odd about Williston's remarks is not that they are in any way unpredictable. What is odd is the fact that Williston still holds on to the myth of the forest industry needing "enough land to fall back on" — when, in fact, he has publicly bragged that using only the land to which it now has access, the forest industry could double its present annual cut "without depleting our forest resource."

If the industry can double its cut using only the land it has now, and do it without depleting the resource, why does it need to hang on to a piddling two or three per cent which could be turned into parkland?

are a pretty colorless lot — he should show just a touch of machismo, so he won't get lost in the crowd.

But — and now we come to another new word — he must have "heft." A man with "heft" is a man who takes things seriously. He wears a psychological black bomburg which he never takes off. He plants one foot ahead of the other and keeps both feet on the ground. You can trust a man with "heft." He deals with big issues. He goes to meetings. He keeps a diary.

Please note that a politician with heft is not described as "hefty." Most candidates would be happy to be described as "a populist of obvious heft." But "a hefty populist" sounds — all wrong.

The language of the organization side of politics has always been borrowed from the military vocabulary. We speak of campaigns, tactics, strategies, left wings, right wings, assaults and so on. But that's all dying out too — and show business is taking over.

Does a manager "plot a campaign strategy" in 1972? No — he does not. If he is up to date he will "orchestrate a scenario" instead.

Nor will he do any "tactical planning." Instead he will choreograph the scenario as soon as it is orchestrated.

So if you know of a modern populist with machismo and heft, whose campaign choreographers have orchestrated a scenario for the 1970s — bet on him. He's a shoo-in.

Education Can Close the Mind

THE MEDICAL POST

There is a lesson somewhere in the growing realization among doctors of the Western World that acupuncture as practiced by the Chinese is more than some ancient method of quackery.

And perhaps that lesson is that the inherent dogmatism of medicine can mislead even the most educated of our practitioners. Or that education is as likely to close the mind as it is to open it. Or, if education does open our minds, it opens them usually into safe corridors where our teachers have already trod.

If any prominent physician on this continent had suggested a few months ago that acupuncture anesthesia did work and that Western doctors should pay serious attention to it, he would have been considered a candidate for a psychiatric ward. Yet now we have well-known physicians in the United States and in Britain attesting to the effectiveness of acupuncture.

Even Dr. Walter R. Tkach, personal physician to President Nixon, and Dr. Paul Dudley White, the eminent cardiologist, have gone on record as saying that acupuncture does work and receiving the procedure himself.

Recently the Wall Street Journal had a delightful editorial needling the American doctors who have made such a right-about-face on the subject of acupuncture. The editorial said the public is taking a measure of crow on the subject of acupuncture.

But the editorial was not hard on the doctors because the writer admitted that doctors were by no means the worst offenders in sticking to dogma, sometimes long after such dogma has been proven false. The editorial concluded with this gentle jibe: "In our age, though, the prevailing mistake seems to be accepting too uncritically whatever is claimed in the name of science, and it's nice to be reminded that not even doctors know as much as they think they do."

Now that acupuncture has intrigued our Western physicians, and anesthetists would dearly love to know what makes it work, we can expect to hear that research groups are subjecting the procedure to careful scientific scrutiny. It is a worthwhile project and should be undertaken. If it works then there must be a physiological reason, and if there is a physiological reason it should be explored.

The Chinese report that over 400,000 operative procedures have been done with acupuncture anesthesia since 1966. The Chinese doctors themselves do not know why it works. They do know where to put the needles to provide regional anesthesia, but so far there has been no scientific explanation.

One thing for sure, doctors on this continent are not going to use acupuncture on their patients until they know more about it, why it works as an anesthetic (before 1957 it was used in China as therapeutic manoeuvre) and its dangers, if any. This could be our contribution to acupuncture . . . to find out why.

Hefting With Machismo

By JOHN NICHOL

It's hard to believe it — but "charisma" is dead. This is shocking, when you consider that in the golden days of the 1960s, a politician without charisma was like a muscle-car without a tape deck — unsaleable.

But a whole new collection of words is available for 1972. Charisma is dead — but wait until you hear what's coming next:

"Machismo" for instance: Not long ago a movie actor was presented in his bare skin in Cosmopolitan magazine. He was hairy, smoked a cigar and the word is that he had "machismo." A man with machismo is supposed to exude sex, violence, cheroot smoke and garlic in equal proportions.

The author Kurt Vonnegut Jr., for example, describes himself as having a breath smelling of mustard gas and roses. There is no evidence that he exudes any sex or violence but even so, he is obviously on his way to being machismatic.

Actually, it may be a bit early for machismo. By 1976 it will be in full political flower, but right now there aren't any candidates around that have it. Adam Clayton Powell is dead, and Fidel Castro is not running.

This year we will have to keep our eye on another word — "populist." Now here is a word that is really high on the ratings. Time magazine heads up its McGovern cover story with the banner "Here comes a prairie populist." The word is everywhere.

A Populist seems to be a politician should be tried on this continent.

Dr. Tkach thinks acupuncture could open a whole new avenue of anesthesia and one without the dangers of systemic traumas which are always possible with our Western anesthetics. When Dr. Tkach was asked if he would recommend acupuncture for his famous patient he naturally hedged, but did say that he would have no hesitation in

New Ocean Rates Hindering Trade

MONTREAL (CP) — The head of an Australian trade mission to Canada says new ocean freight rates are having a serious effect on the trade of certain products shipped between Australia and Canada.

Alf J. Smith of Sydney, Australian manager for the Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd., said the increase of 25 per cent in shipping rates nine months ago is especially affecting products whose freight costs are high in proportion to their value.

He said at the end of a week-long trade visit to Montreal that the unexpectedly high jump in shipping charges came as a surprise to traders after shipping companies had promised rates would be held down with the introduction of container shipping.

Smith is head of a 14-member food industry mission organized by the Australian department of trade and industry.

The Australian businessmen spent a couple of days in Ottawa discussing trade matters with Canadian government officials before coming to Montreal.

Smith estimated the group did about $1 million of new business during its stay in Quebec which, along with the Atlantic provinces, imports about $35 million worth of Australian wines, food and confectionary products annually.

Smith said a major effort was made in Quebec to increase sales of such products as canned and dried fruits, frozen beef and gourmet foods which are currently being sold in growing amounts in Western Canada.

Arctic Gas Promising

TORONTO (CP) — The president of Mobil Oil Canada Ltd. said Tuesday that exploration in the Yukon, Northwest Territories and Beaufort Sea area of the Arctic last winter led to significant discoveries of natural gas reserves.

Arne R. Nielsen told the annual meeting of the Canadian Gas Association that although estimates of the reserves have not been released by the various operators testing in the area, it appeared that a number were successful.

"It is reported that the level of gas reserve additions in the Mackenzie Delta will be sufficient to justify transportation systems in the not too distant future," said Nielsen.

He also said there are nine drilling rigs in the Arctic islands and the results have shown promise.

TEMPORARY DEFICIENCY

"It is apparent that the Arctic is well on its way to becoming a major area of natural gas development," he said, adding that about 400 million will be spent on exploration in the Arctic islands region during the next five years.

Referring to the recent decision by the National Energy Board not to allow increased gas exports because as reserves were deficient, Nielsen said the deficiency is only temporary.

The major challenge facing the gas industry, he said, is discovering new gas reserves to support the high cost of exploration.

"They must also be large enough to support the giant multi-billion dollar transportation systems which will be needed to move the gas to market," he said.

Nielsen also said it is essential for the gas industry to have access to the high-density United States gas market.

"We recognize the need to ensure a supply of gas for Canada's future, but Canadian markets alone cannot support frontier exploration. To try to do so could have the ultimate net effect of creating a gas shortage within Canada."

METALS DEMAND

OTTAWA (CP) — A study by the International Monetary Fund indicates stronger world demand for major nonferrous metals will develop this year, and developing countries will share in the healthier market.

The study concentrates on copper, tin, lead and zinc produced by Asian, African and South American countries. Canada is a major producer of copper, lead and zinc, but gets little mention in an extract of the study appearing in the IMF's international financial news summary.

Markets and prices for non-ferrous metals were upset last year for various reasons ranging from oversupply to strikes and shipping difficulties. There was also softer demand as business slowed in the major consuming countries.

"The outlook is for a gradual and moderate increase in non-ferrous metal prices in 1972," the study says. Prices on the London Metal Exchange will move upward more markedly towards the end of the year, and U.S. prices may be raised "as soon as stronger demand seems likely to be sustained."

Stronger world demand is based on recovery of industrial activity in the U.S., reinforced by recovery in Japan and Western Europe.

Supplies should increase significantly too, if they are not interrupted as they were last year by mining, processing and transportation strikes.

B.C. Leads Economic Recovery

MONTREAL (CP) — The Bank of Montreal says a study of five major economic regions shows that the resurgence in the economy was felt most strongly in British Columbia and Ontario.

The bank said in its latest business review released Tuesday night that British Columbia benefitted from the strengthening of the North American lumber markets and the construction boom.

The gross provincial product in that province "grew in excess of 11 per cent while the growth of retail sales exceeded that of any other region by a wide margin."

Last year saw the impact of strong domestic demand expand national output by 5.3 per cent, the bank said, and although unemployment remained a problem, about 334,000 job opportunities were created.

The 4.6-per-cent increase in British Columbia's job opportunities was also the most rapid among all regions, and despite many new residents the unemployment rate dropped to seven per cent in 1971 from 7.6 per cent in 1970.

The economic upswing also was reflected in Ontario, which accounts for about 40 per cent of both total output and personal incomes.

In Quebec, soft markets plagued a number of major industries but in general the province shared in last year's economic recovery.

The bank said that while the Prairies enjoyed a strong demand in international markets, the resource-based industries of the Atlantic provinces and Quebec suffered from the soft international markets.

In the Prairies the heavy reliance on a few export commodities, considered a weakness two years ago, turned out to be a major strength in 1972.

Favorable International market for wheat and the continued expansion of petroleum production saw the Prairie economy rebound sharply from the stagnant levels of 1970.

flushed by rising wages and salaries which grew by an above-average rate of 14.5 per cent.

'Nobody's Against Hi-Rise'

Mayor Peter Pollen told B.C. municipal officers today that citizens reacting to local development are really opposed to having an environment forced on them without having a say in it.

"Nobody is against high-rises in Victoria," Pollen said at Newcombe Auditorium in reference to what he called recent "notoriety surrounding the city of Victoria."

He said what was wanted in local development was things that would "enhance the city for future generations."

"What we are really against is having an environment imposed upon us," Pollen said. People want the opportunity to tell government and developers what they want.

The mayor welcomed some 250 delegates to the 33rd annual conference of the Municipal Officers' Association of B.C., its first meeting in the capital since 1968.

Local government, Pollen said, is "the most significant element in the body politic today," coming between the demands of the individual and the corporation. The more sophisticated the population the more demanding it becomes, and today's tendency is to lose perspective and objectivity amid such overwhelming pressure, Pollen said.

"I hope I'm not too philosophical for you," he said, explaining that demands must be defined as political objectives within historical perspective and "the realm of the possible."

Municipal officers, Pollen said, provide the politicians with that perspective.

"The municipalities need you, the province needs you and the mayors need you."

Despite the pressure of demands, Pollen said he finds the "age of consultants" (everyone from homeowners to hippies telling councils what to do) a stimulating one; "it keeps us on our toes."

Outgoing president of the association, Richmond municipal administrator T. M. Youngberg stressed the need for continuing education of municipal officers, particularly through courses for senior staff, as local government grows and changes.

Municipal officers must continue to provide good advice for both the municipal affairs department and the Union of B.C. Municipalities, which hold the officers' association in good regard.

Greetings on behalf of Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell were given by deputy minister and inspector of municipalities Jim Baird in his final appearance at the annual event. Baird retires June 30.

He noted a number of lower mainland officers had missed the conference due to a strike of municipal staffs in Greater Vancouver, which he hoped would be settled soon.

"I don't know what these municipal employees expect from the poor taxpayers," Baird said. The fact that civil servants would strike at all was "beyond my comprehension," he said.

Members of Fishermen's Unions pleaded for Workmen's Compensation Board benefits.

Bennett waded into the demonstrators with his arms outstretched and posed for photographers with two pickets. One carried a sign saying "you will be replaced."

Carpenters were complaining about the refusal of the Construction Labor Relations Association to allow school and hospital construction during the current lockout of construction unions, and asked the premier to intercede.

When they arrived in Prince Rupert from Vancouver Island, where audiences had been enthusiastic, they were met by placard-carrying pickets.

For Bennett and his cabinet, on a two-week tour of the province, it was a day in which they were serenaded, picketed, laughed at and questioned sharply.

MacLeod walked out of William Head prison Sept. 17, 1971. He was due for release Dec. 31, 1977.

Edna Louise Smith, 58, of 343 Michigan was fined $250 for stealing a bottle of after-shave lotion valued at $1.29 from Safeway, 455 Simcoe, May 4.

Douglas John Argue, 19, and Robert Lewis Noble, 30, both of 886 Dunsmuir, were fined $300 each on a joint charge of mischief.

Windows worth $188 were broken May 19 at Pitt and Holt Plumbing, 602 Esquimalt, and Dowell's Moving, 630 Esquimalt, after the pair had been drinking.

In traffic court, Judge E. F. N. Robinson sentenced John Gagnon, 340 Hillside, to 30 days in jail, and gave him a one-year driving ban for two charges of impaired driving and refusing to take a breath test April 9 and 11.

Walter Gallagher, 65, of 1780 Fort, was fined $400 and given a three-month partial driving ban after he pleaded guilty to driving while impaired May 10 in Victoria.

KITIMAT (CP) — Premier Bennett abruptly ended a civic dinner in the face of critical questions and jeers Monday night.

He called it a "delightful" meeting and declared that he and his cabinet did not "resent" a single question. But then he shot out of the door leaving members of his audience still with questions to ask.

For Bennett and his cabinet, on a two-week tour of the province, it was a day in which they were serenaded, picketed, laughed at and questioned sharply.

When they arrived in Prince Rupert from Vancouver Island, where audiences had been enthusiastic, they were met by placard-carrying pickets.

Carpenters were complaining about the refusal of the Construction Labor Relations Association to allow school and hospital construction during the current lockout of construction unions, and asked the premier to intercede.

Members of Fishermen's Unions pleaded for Workmen's Compensation Board benefits.

Bennett waded into the demonstrators with his arms outstretched and posed for photographers with two pickets. One carried a sign saying "you will be replaced."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Norman Angus MacLeod, 46, was sentenced to one year for escaping custody and one year for being unlawfully at large, with the two terms to be served concurrently, by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Tuesday.

MacLeod walked out of William Head prison Sept. 17, 1971. He was due for release Dec. 31, 1977.

Edna Louise Smith, 58, of 343 Michigan was fined $250 for stealing a bottle of after-shave lotion valued at $1.29 from Safeway, 455 Simcoe, May 4.

Douglas John Argue, 19, and Robert Lewis Noble, 30, both of 886 Dunsmuir, were fined $300 each on a joint charge of mischief.

Windows worth $188 were broken May 19 at Pitt and Holt Plumbing, 602 Esquimalt, and Dowell's Moving, 630 Esquimalt, after the pair had been drinking.

In traffic court, Judge E. F. N. Robinson sentenced John Gagnon, 340 Hillside, to 30 days in jail, and gave him a one-year driving ban for two charges of impaired driving and refusing to take a breath test April 9 and 11.

Walter Gallagher, 65, of 1780 Fort, was fined $400 and given a three-month partial driving ban after he pleaded guilty to driving while impaired May 10 in Victoria.

SHIPPING CUTS BACK BRIDGE USE

Towboat operators are co-operating well with the city in causing minimum interruption to peak-hour traffic on the Johnson Street Bridge, aldermen were told Tuesday.

City manager Bill Hoosen told the public works committee that in April the bridge was opened 22 times during peak hours — on 13 occasions between 7:30 and 9 a.m.; and on nine between 4 and 5:30 p.m.

This compared with about 60 openings a month last year, Hoosen said.

Ald. Ove Witt noted it was almost a two-thirds drop.

In response to a city request, the B.C. Towboat Owners' Association asked its members last February to avoid using the bridge during busy morning and evening traffic periods, except in cases of emergency.

Howard Grants Extended

The John Howard Society has received more money from the federal government for a prisoner education and public speaking program, Michael Bennett, the society's executive director, announced Tuesday.

The program is designed to aid prisoners before release and to sponsor public speeches on prison reform by ex-convicts.

Bennett said a $7,000 local initiatives grant scheduled to end in May has been extended until September.

This will allow the society to continue its program of providing ex-convicts as speakers to schools, churches, and social clubs.

"The response has been good, we have been receiving requests from schools to continue into June."

The society now hopes to expand the program — at present confined to Victoria — to the Nanaimo area.

Money from the grant also enabled ex-prisoners to research and compile How to Score on the Street — a booklet which outlines services available to prisoners upon release and where to find them.

Two former prisoners are visiting B.C. institutions to explain the booklet.

Solicitor-General Jean-Paul Goyer wrote saying: "After reading the booklet in question I was most impressed by the value and the valuable service it will give the inmates in our institutions."

Saanich Praises Developer For Built-In Subdivision Park

A new subdivision with a built-in park — the first of its kind in Gordon Head area — met with the approval of Saanich planning committee Tuesday night.

Ald Edith Gunning called it "something of a breakthrough where provision is made for a park within a subdivision" in a developing area like Gordon Head.

The piece of land is relatively small, only about 100 by 375 feet, paralleling San Pedro, between San Miguel and San Juan on flat agricultural land.

Planner Tom Loney pointed out the adjoining parcel, which would be subdivided before long, could provide for a similar strip back to back with the green space in question, to make a more substantial park for the neighborhood.

The developer proposes to deed the piece to Saanich, which would then reserve it for park use.

Loney said it would have cost $25,000 to $30,000 for the municipality to buy such a piece of land.

All of the subdivision's proerties — about 10 — would overlook the park.

The committee found reasonable a request by Gordon Head Ratepayers' Association that council ask land developers to do feasibility studies before embarking on new undertakings.

But the committee felt the considerations which such studies contain are already matters dealt with by the municipal planning department in the normal course of events.

"I think these are the things we consider," Loney said, mentioning market analysis as one item.

Committee members were uneasy about a recent provincial government provision for the subdivision of two-acre parcels from larger holdings of land to allow for the establishment of a second residence for an immediate relative or member of the owner's family.

Mrs. Gunning was concerned the rule would conflict with a local minimum five-acre subdivision on Saanich land.

Loney, who said he felt the committee should be aware of the provision, said it would override the Saanich restriction. He said there had been no such applications yet.

"I have a feeling there will be," once it is known," commenting Ald. Leslie Passmore.

Mrs. Gunning said she recalled when Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell originally proposed this sort of provision, which was to handle cases of hardship within the 10-acre regional district freeze on subdivision.

Passmore said he could see occasional instances where there would be no reason to object to such applications.

Lands and housing committee recommended to council that a 1.165-acre parcel of land within Swan Lake Creek development plan be purchased for $9,250 for future park use.

The parcel falls within a proposed extension of Braefoot Park, although it is unlikely to be used for several years, and would be unsuitable for subdivision because of drainage problems.

But last year, Gary got sick and dropped a grand — money he couldn't afford to lose. What he wants is a better hourly rate, an improved medical plan, a dental care plan and a pension. Which isn't asking for much. Not when he's a skilled worker, not when he's been with the same operation for twenty-six years. Moral: If You Own It It Will Soon Own You

Our notes today concern the profound perils of materialistic domesticity that await every man who takes a bride, but don't let that put you off. We'll brighten up in a minute.

It begins with a chat with Jack Beasly, garden author, philosopher and gentleman. Jack has in the works an article asking the question "What Is a Garden?" that will appear Saturday in these pages and that you won't want to miss. Since there are almost as many answers to the question as there are gardeners it may possibly run to encyclopedic length.

That is all I will say about it, not to steal Jack's thunder, but it started me brooding about the garden in my life and the wee house in my life and everything else in my life that count as possessions and demand the discipline of care-taking.

We now have, for example, an enormous stretch of lawn, a possession created heroically, all but single-handedly, by my wife who took a sort of unkempt meadow, had it aerated, had it fertilized, had it de-weeded and caused a miracle to be wrought. My wife is proud of this. I am proud of my wife. But that garden somehow has become a vulture muttering on my shoulder.

Time was, in that first moment of awakening, when I might contemplate the day ahead with anticipation, eager for what might come. Now, when I awake, my mind is filled with the roar of that lawn growing, growing, threatening to run amok, to return at any moment to its original chaos, unless I get out there and beat it back. The lawn is threatening, that's what it is. When it was just meadow I might lie in it or wedge some golf balls across it. Now I'm employed by it.

Possessions seem to have this effect nine times out of 10. The moment you acquire them they acquire you. Say, for example, that you decide to keep chickens, as I did. You do this so that the chickens will work for you, providing you with eggs. It takes but a single day to discover that you are working for the chickens and that the chickens, who only lay eggs, have by far the best of the deal — in dignity, effort and man-or-chicken-hours.

The hunger for possessions may reflect the appetite of the wife or the husband, but mainly it comes from acquiring each other. The honeymoon is seldom over before most couples are fully launched into a lifetime of getting the hardware of domesticity, the vast midden of artifacts and assorted junk that accumulate during every married life.

Our own long record of accumulation has been complicated by the kind of homes that we have owned with truly manic regularity. My wife has said, "We don't buy a house, we adopt one, like taking in an orphan" and that is the way it has been.

Whether this originally reflected my wife's taste or mine is lost in the mists of our marriage, but somewhere along the line our concept of what a house should be fused and embarked us on 30-odd years of painting, plastering, plumbing and the allied building trades.

What we demand in a house is something indefinable called "character." In practice that means, first, that the house must be old, that it must be far too enormous or far too small, that it must be in the last stages of wet or dry rot, that it must be the kind of decrepit house no one else in his right mind would dream of owning. Put an ad in the paper for any condemned cottage. Label it "Handyman's Special." You will find us whimpering at your door, cheque book in hand.

The curse of our lives has been that we are able to look at such a house, a house designed by a five-year-old child with a crayon, and we are hooked. We see only the house that will be when the hand-cut shakes are on the roof, when 800 gallons of white latex, at $13 per gallon, have covered its pitted blemishes, when a sun deck is put across its front. Look for any lap-sided, canted monstrosity in the western world that has a new shake roof, a sun deck and a new skin of paint, like a little old lady gone berserk with Max Factor. That will be a Scott house.

We must surely be the only surviving couple who have never once moved into a house without immediately taking to the ladders. Lord love us, we're at it right this minute, painting the Rumpelstiltskin box out Metcoshin-way that we just had to have or life wouldn't be worth living.

I admit, of course, to moments of doubt. Indeed, only yesterday, clinging to the eaves, white latex cascading down my arm, I vowed, "One day we'll give up this life and buy a tent." To which my wife, sighing, replied, "If we bought a tent we'd paint it."

Is there an alternative to this familiar tyranny of possessions? I often wonder. Sometimes when I pick up the young hitch-hikers headed out to the Jordan River country, their entire worldly goods in a knapsack on their back, totally uninhibited by the panicky need to keep a step ahead of growing grass or termites in the woodwork, I wonder if maybe we shouldn't be going that unencumbered way, too, before it is too late, before the lawn and the house and the rest swallow us whole.

But, sure as you're born, there'd be some rotten little old run-down wreck of a place at Jordan River, a place thirsting for paint, a place with a tangled undergrowth that might make a lawn, and there we'd go again.

MOTORIST KILLED

One person was killed in the crash of a car and a defence department truck in the 700 block of Admirals Road at 10:50 a.m. today.

The victim was the car driver, Floyd Worthington Noyes, 65, of Vancouver.

Esquimalt Police said the car being driven north met the semi-trailer truck about the centre line of Admirals. Its driver was the sole occupant. At least one other person was with the truck driver.

Damage to the semi-trailer was light, and the car was wrecked.

Water Board Tax 'Unjust'

Greater Victoria Water Board will make another approach to the provincial government in an effort to get some relief from the tax against the district's watershed logging operations.

Board members agreed today that the submission should stress the inequities of the 15-per-cent logging tax as it affects the water district and logging companies.

Water Commissioner Ron Upward said the tax was imposed last year for logging done on the 33,000-acre watershed and the district paid it retroactively for the period back to 1970.

But he pointed out that because logging companies are profit-making organizations, they can recover two-thirds through federal income tax deductions, so that they effectively pay only about five per cent.

The money which the board makes from its logging operations — $138,000 last year — used to offset losses from the sale of water.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances El-

ford recalled that the board made representations to the provincial cabinet last fall, but added: "There would be no harm in approaching the province and pointing out this inequity and asking them to reconsider the amount of tax we pay."

Saanich Ald. William Noel agreed the levy should not go unchallenged. He pointed out that Saanich had scored a minor victory over B.C. Hydro by "hammering away" at the utility on the question of putting transmission lines underground.

In other business, the board accepted a $107,864 tender from W. Campbell Limited for construction of a half-million gallon reservoir on Otter Point Road in the Sooke area.

The tank will serve three purposes. It will provide fire protection, act as an emergency supply if there are disruptions to the distribution system and allow up to two days of repairs on the 55-year-old, 16-mile line between Sooke Lake and Sooke Harbor.

The embattled Damien Society, which has been providing methadone treatment for about 60 Victoria narcotics addicts, has lost its last hope for support from the federal government and will close today.

Dr. Jack Patterson, society director, made the announcement at his home Tuesday evening and predicted that crime in Victoria would increase when the addicts' source of methadone is cut off.

"There will be a crime wave like you never saw before in Victoria," Patterson warned.

The society has been involved in controversy almost from its inception last November and its troubles started to peak a month ago when it was refused a provincial charter "because it would not be in the public interest."

Following the provincial refusal, Patterson flew to Ottawa for consultation with federal officials of the non-medical use of drugs directorate.

"I was hoping to get a federal charter which would have allowed me also to qualify for a federal grant with which to meet operating expenses," Patterson said.

But Tuesday night a dejected Patterson said he had received word from federal authorities that he would not be granted a federal charter.

"All along they have shown sympathy to me but I am told that they don't want to get into a fight with the province," Patterson said.

Today the society's Douglas Street offices had been vacated and were under renovation for use as a general insurance office.

The refusal of a charter to the society forces its closure because of new federal legislation which takes effect June 1. The legislation requires that only doctors or clinics with special federal permission be allowed to prescribe methadone to addicts.

The only such clinic in Victoria is the Narcotic Addiction Rehabilitation Centre (NARC) which is headed by Dr. James Laing and backed by the Victoria Medical Association. It is a satellite unit of the B.C. Narcotics Addiction Foundation which is backed by federal and provincial grants. There are four such clinics operating in the province.

However, Dr. Gordon Lott, president of the Victoria Medical Association, said that many of the addicts being treated at the Damien Society could be accommodated by NARC.

"We foresaw a month ago that there would be a sharp increase in the demand on Dr. Laing's clinic after June 1," Lott said.

"We approached Denholme (Douglas Denholme, Executive Director of the NAF) and he felt that Dr. Laing's existing plant would be sufficient to double his present intake with the addition of one staff member—a paramedical type of person," Lott said.

"That is what is going to happen and beyond that, if there proves to be additional need, we will have to wait and see. You can understand that the drug addict population is one that is highly transitory—it is hard to tell how many there really are," he added.

City Leads Poisonings

By DON VIPOND

A provincial summary shows Greater Victoria led all health districts in British Columbia last year in recorded poisoning cases.

Dr. A. A. Larsen, provincial epidemiologist, said today one likely reason is a better system locally for reporting cases.

Another factor may be a higher proportion of elderly people who sometimes forget they have taken their medicine and end up taking it twice.

The review summarizes information sent in by hospitals throughout B.C. It shows 1,037 poisoning cases dealt with in Greater Victoria during 1971.

The Greater Vancouver health district, with several times the population, recorded 810. But Larsen said the emergency department at Vancouver General Hospital is so busy it's suspected quite a number of poisonings go unrecorded.

The report is not specific in separating accidental poisonings from suicide attempts because many times it's impossible to find out.

"But when you get into teen age and adult cases, I find it hard to believe in most incidents it was accidental."

In Greater Victoria last year hospitals reported 417 cases involving one to four-year-olds, 361 poisonings among people 20 to 59 years old, 117 among 15 to 19-year-olds, and 72 cases including people 60 or over.

With youngsters, it's mostly a case of them getting into the cupboard under the kitchen sink or in the bathroom or at the shelves in the garage, all favorite places for storing poisonous substances.

Most of the 907 cases of aspirin poisoning B.C. hospital recorded last year were in the under 5 age group. But there were 156 aspirin cases involving people 15 to 24.

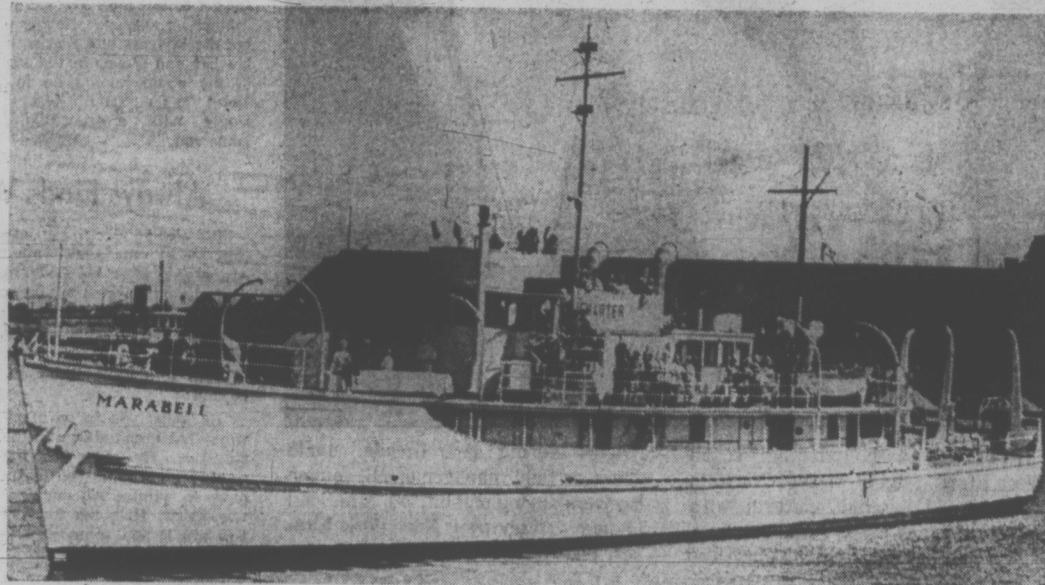

Where poisonings were by drugs affecting the central nervous system, there were 955 cases involving tranquilizers, 651 involving barbiturates, 390 involving other sedatives and hypnotics and 193 involving narcotics, including heroin and morphine.

Narcotic poisonings were concentrated in those 15 or older but there were 17 cases among two-year-olds.

Mood-changing drugs produced 311 cases, including 244 involving LSD, mostly 15 to 24-year-olds.

Bleaches proved the most dangerous of household cleaning and polishing agents, producing 73 poisoning cases during 1971.

The report, dealing with 6,612 poisoning cases, classifies 2,273 of them as other than accidental and among these, women outnumbered men two to one.

Marabell's off on a new career, this time as a charter vessel

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

One of the grand old ladies of the waterfront is back in harness again as a charter ship after being "in mothballs" since 1969.

She's the 136-foot Marabell, who first began her sea-going career as the American minesweeper YMS 9 in 1943.

Life became a little more frivolous for her in 1948 when she became a millionaire's plaything, being converted into a private yacht for the heir of the Dr. Ballard dog-biscuit company.

It was down to business again in 1953 when she underwent another conversion and became a hydrographic survey vessel, plying these waters until 1969. She was replaced with the CSS Parizeau and the CSS Vector.

HE FELL

It was love at first sight when Claude Lacerte spied her lying forlornly alongside at the McKay-Cormack shipyard.

Lacerte and his wife, Pauline, hail from Trois Rivieres, Que. Since he was 14, Lacerte has been involved with boats.

His first was a 15-foot dinghy which he and a chum built one winter. Her sails and the two boys' matching sailor suits were sewn by Lacerte's mother.

That boat was the first of many for Lacerte, including a 65-foot schooner which he sailed to the Virgin Islands.

Not that he was entirely boatless when he met Marabell. He was then a lieutenant serving in the destroyer-escort HMCS Columbia.

"But that was nothing compared to having my own command," he says.

HAUNTED

The memory of Marabell haunted him even when he was on sea duty.

The tug tightened and in October, when the Columbia was in Alaska, the decision was made.

He phoned from Alaska and Marabell was his.

Now he's out of the navy and Marabell, gleaming with paint, is back in action.

Guests mounting Marabell's gangplank almost expect to be piped aboard in true naval style. Small wonder — three of her five-man crew are Lacerte's old shipmates aboard Columbia.

They are her first mate, Michael Norris, the "buffer" (chief bosun's mate), Corey Mackay and engineer Gary Wright.

The cook, Frank Fairless, also served with the Royal Canadian Navy.

HEARD CALL

The only non-navy type aboard is the ship's boy, Patrick Jordan, 16, lured here from Quebec by the call of the sea.

Marabell's first cruise as a charter ship, appropriately enough, was a trip to Seattle with Lacerte's Columbia pals and their wives as passengers.

This morning she slipped from her berth at the CPR dock in the Inner Harbor. This time her manifest listed a group of senior citizens, being treated to a sea trip by Unit 12 of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans.

Watching her nose out to sea, she looked every bit as sprightly as when she was a millionaire's darling.

Viewer Of Nude No Prude

Plenty of nameless people march across the pages of the Times, part of the background in news pictures.

Occasionally they return. Last week, for example, the camera of photographer Bill Halkett caught a woman eyeing sidewalk paintings along Yates Street.

And the painting holding her attention was a nude.

The writer of the lines beneath the picture noted the watcher's face was hidden so there was no way of knowing whether she approved or not. In Victoria, one wonders.

Now we know.

Georgina Harrison wrote to the Times to explain.

As a former physiotherapist, she said, she was inspecting to see if the proportions of the named young lady were correct. They were.

"I agree with your implication that Victoria is rather conservative ... I hope we shall read no more of B.C. judges condemning Denkhörs ... for nude parading."

She is glad to read that thousands in the U.S. are now bathing nude without being bothered by police.

"I think beauty competitions would be fairer and healthier if the contestants did not parade in high heels and wired bras."

Proportionately Perfect!

Players Oppose CFL's Import 'Manufacturing'

(Times News Services)

Dick Aldridge, linebacker-defensive halfback with Toronto Argonauts, said Tuesday in Toronto the Canadian Football League Players' Association will ask the CFL to rescind legislation that has changed the distribution of imports and non-imports.

The players will put their request to the CFL before the CFLPA all-star game at Calgary late in June.

At its annual meeting in February, the CFL voted to allow each of the nine teams to dress 17 non-imports Canadian-born and trained and 15 imports. The previous allotment was 18 non-imports and 14 imports for each game.

Argos, of the Eastern Football Conference, would be in a position to dress three players in their lineup that formerly were reserved for bona fide Canadian players.

Halfbacks John Carlos and Bill Hernandez are United States citizens, but for football purposes in Canada are classified as non-imports because they never played football in the United States.

Legislation to this effect was passed by the CFL last year when Carlos joined Montreal Alouettes.

"The CFL will have to rewrite the definition of imports and non-imports," said Aldridge. The veteran Argonaut said there is nothing personal about Carlos or Hernandez, merely that the CFL has been a victim of its own "legal manufacturing."

Elsewhere in sports . . . International Olympic Committee president Avery Brundage has expressed concern over possibility of anti-Communist or other political demonstrations during the Olympic Games in Munich.

Brundage told a news conference that East Germany and the Soviet Union had warned the committee of the danger of such demonstrations.

"We are all very concerned on this subject," Brundage said. "This includes the German organizing committee, which is taking every step to see that no demonstration or political interference should occur."

Meanwhile, the executive board of the IOC declared Tuesday that the French national committee, set up recently under government auspices, was in violation of Olympic rules and could not be recognized as sponsor for the French team at the Munich Games.

The board instructed its French vice-president, Count Jean de Beaumont, to set up an emergency body with the presidents of the French sports federations as a provisional measure permitting French athletes to compete at Munich this summer.

IN TENNIS, Don McCormick of Victoria was eliminated 5-7, 6-4, 6-3 by Stanley Matthews, a British Davis Cup player, in the opening round of the Rothman's Surrey grass-court tennis championships Tuesday at Surbiton, England. . . Stan Smith and Billie Jean King kept United States hopes alive for singles victories in the French Open at Paris. . . Smith, top-seeded in the U.S. contingent, ousted Frantisek Pala of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-0, 6-3 to reach the quarter-finals while Mrs. King downed Virginia Wade of Britain 6-1, 6-3 to move into the semi-finals.

IN HOCKEY, former Toronto Maple Leaf Brad Selwood, who signed a three-year contract with New England Whalers of the New World Association, reported yet another member of the Leafs is leaving the National League. . . Attending a sports dinner at Windsor, Ont., Selwood says centre Jim Harrison has signed with Edmonton Oilers after Toronto general manager told the centre he was "too inconsistent" and offered the player a raise of $5,000. . . New York Raiders of the WHA announced the signing of Alton White, one of two black players in pro hockey (Willie O'Ree of San Diego Gulls is the other). . . White, 27, played with Providence in the American League last year. . . Los Angeles Sharks are claiming Earl Heiskala, left-winger from San Diego, and Joe Szura, Baltimore Clipper center, have signed with the WHA club. . . Los Angeles Kings of the NHL, meanwhile, have satisfied forwards Butch Goring and Real Lemieux. . .

IN GENERAL, George Best, 26, the Manchester United and Northern Ireland soccer star who announced his retirement from the game recently, refused comment on his future plans on arrival back in England from Spain on Tuesday. . . Infielder Dalton Jones was traded by Detroit Tigers to Texas Rangers, both of the American League, for minor league pitcher Norman McRae. . . Muhammed Ali and Jerry Quarry, slated to meet in Las Vegas June 26, were rated No. 1 and No. 2 contenders for Joe Frazier's heavyweight title by the World Boxing Council. . . Bob Lunn, $26,000 richer after his victory in the Atlanta Golf Classic last week, is now 31st in PGA money standings.

Lawyer Suggests Five-Year Bind

BOSTON (AP) — A Boston attorney who makes his living negotiating contracts for athletes proposed today that professional sports end arguments over reserve clauses by agreeing to bind athletes to the service of one team for only five years.

Bob Woolf, who negotiates for 200 athletes, said athletes should be allowed to be re-drafted if they are unhappy after working for one team for five years.

"The proposal is aimed primarily at pro football, but it should work for every sport, because they all have that common problem," Woolf said.

With federal court suits pending against reserve clauses, Woolf said professional football and others could solve the dilemma this way:

● An athlete would be bound for five years to the team which drafted him, but if after that time he is unhappy he could place his name in a veterans pool.

● Teams would draft from the pool, the team with the worst record getting the first pick, and so on.

● If unable to come to terms with his new team in a 30-day period, the player could place his name back in the pool and be drafted again. If unable to reach agreement then, he could be drafted once more but would be bound to the third team for one year. An athlete could repeat the drafting cycle yearly after playing his fifth year.

Pro football players now may elect to play out their option by not signing a contract in any given year, for which they take a 10-per-cent salary cut. They are then free to negotiate with any team. But if they're signed, the team signing them must give up a player or players designated by National Football League commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Memories of past lacrosse glories will be revived several times over as the "old" steps forward to add the "new" Saturday at Memorial Arena.

The occasion will be the second annual old-timers' lacrosse game, pitting Victoria Shamrocks against Nanaimo Timbermen. All proceeds will go toward support of the Greater Victoria minor lacrosse program.

Braves during last decade, made debut as field manager of Milwaukee Brewers during one-hit, 3-1 American League victory over New York Yankees. (AP Wirephoto).

Burrards Share Lead After Lacing Adanacs

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Burrards bested Coquitlam Adanacs, 17-13, Tuesday night and moved into a tie for the Western Lacrosse Association lead with New Westminster Salmonbellies.

Bill Rawson's four goals was the top individual effort for the rookie-studded Burrards but a four-point performance gave Gord Frederickson the lead in the individual point race.

Frederickson produced his 13th and 14th goals as well as two assists to make it 35 points for the season, one more than owned by rookie-teammate Rick Ormar, who was held to a single goal.

Doug Hayes, another rookie, scored his 18th, 19th and 20th goals to again give Burrards a big boost.

John Allen of Adanacs was the leading point-getter of the game, scoring five times to double his goal output for the season and adding two assists to move into contention for the scoring lead. He has 29 points.

Burrards have a chance to take the league lead tonight when they play in Victoria against the Shamrocks. A victory for the home side would create a three-way tie for the lead.

Ranjit Nearing Point Milestone

Vancouver Burrards, who have harvested the finest crop of rookies in recent memory in the Western Lacrosse Association this season, bring their first place club to town tonight for their first Victoria appearance of the season.

Burrards — including four rookies who have emerged as instant stars — will be out to take over sole possession of first place when they take on the Shamrocks at 8:30 in Memorial Arena.

However, coach Ed Kowalyk and his crew have other thoughts. They'd like a share of the lead and a Victoria victory would create a three-way jam at the top with the Irish, Burrards and New Westminster.

Rookie Rick Ormar, who led the league in scoring since opening night, holds down second place, just one point back of veteran Gord Frederickson who had four points in Tuesday's win over Coquitlam.

Mammoth Doug Hayes has a league-leading 20 goals in his rookie season with the Burrards.

Roberto in Fold ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League say they have signed right winger Phil Roberto, 23, to a multi-year contract.

Ralph Baker will coach the Victoria crew and Andy Ocharick, the first Shamrock president, will throw in the ball for the opening faceoff.

Another Hall-of-Famer, Harry Whipple, will coach Nanaimo, whose lineup will include such stalwarts as Jim Gold, Lawrence Garland, Don Ashbee and rugged John Ferguson, who gained national prominence as the hard-rock forward with Montreal Canadiens.

The squads will tangle in a 60-minute battle consisting of four 15-minute periods — in itself a memory.

In preliminary games, Victoria faces Juan de Fuca in a mini-tyke tussle at 7 p.m. and Esquimalt tackles Victoria in a pee-wee game at 7:30.

Introductions of yesterday's stars and warmups begin at 8 p.m. with the actual Shamrock-Timbermen game beginning at 8:30.

SHAMROCKS
Whitely Severson, Archie Brown, Art Green Sr., Art Green Jr., Al Davies, Len Scott, Larry Booth, Harry Irwin, Mel Davison, Jew Landess, Bert Berolia, Dave Unwin, Bob McGowan, George Johnstone, Duff McCahey, Jim McNellie, Bob Couits, Ed Popham, Red McMillan, Ron Jay.

TIMBERMEN
Jim Gold, Lawrence Garland, Don Ashbee, Arnie Ousan, Soud Morelli, Skip McKay, Lisle Scott, Fred Fula, Earl Bennie, Don Sherry, Bud Dumont, Terry Rodway, Norm Fula, Dave Patterson, Bill Seward, Doug White, Harold Fox, John Ferguson.

Robinson Lifts Dodgers to Top

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Los Angeles Dodgers against San Francisco Giants? To Frank Robinson, it's just another ball game. But he's got other incentives.

"I haven't been around here long enough to get any specific feeling over the Dodgers-Giants rivalry," the Los Angeles right fielder said Tuesday night after leading the Dodgers to a 5-3 victory over the Giants. "These games haven't got the adrenalin flowing."

"But this was a very important game," Robinson added. "It got us into first."

More properly, Robinson got the Dodgers into first with his bat and glove. In the top of the eighth inning he followed Willie Davis' leadoff single with a tiebreaking home run.

Then, in the bottom of the inning, with the Giants threatening to score—and stumbling all over themselves in the futile attempt—he gunned down a San Francisco runner at the plate to preserve the Dodgers' victory.

In the rest of the National League's weather-wrecked schedule, New York Mets beat Philadelphia Phillies 7-0 and Cincinnati Reds defeated Houston Astros 9-8. Rain postponed the San Diego-at-Atlanta and Pittsburgh-at-Montreal games and cold weather knocked out St. Louis' contest against Cubs in Chicago.

Always Finds Way to Do the Job

"It's always nice to get into first place," manager Walter Alton said after his Dodgers slipped past Houston to take a one-half game lead over the Astros in the National League West.

Then, turning to Robinson, he said:

"He helps you in so many ways that aren't shown in the statistics. He gives us the power we need and you really have to admire his competitive spirit. He's the kind of guy you'll find some way to beat you."

Robinson also drove in a run with a sacrifice fly as the Dodgers built a 3-0 lead, only to see it evaporate by the seventh inning as Dave Kingman belted his 12th home run and Bobby Bonds knocked in two runs with a single and a fly ball.

Then came the bizarre bottom of the eighth in which he Giants managed to get through it without a run despite three singles and a hit batsman.

Tito Fuentes and Ed Goodson singled and Dmasco Blanco, just up from the minors, went in to run for Goodson.

Kingman, the next batter, then missed a bunt attempt and Fuentes, who had taken off on the pitch, was trapped between second and third.

He finally managed, with some urging by the Dodgers, to make it back to second, only to find Blanco already there. Blanco was called out on the play.

But the inning was hardly over. Kingman was hit by a pitch, then Chris Speier lined a single to right—and Robinson's perfect strike to catcher Duke Sims nailed Fuentes at the plate. Garry Maddox finally ended the nonsense with an inning-ending grounder.

Crandall Welcomed by One-Hitter

White Sox 6-0. Detroit and Cleveland were rained out.

Only 4,175 fans saw Crandall's managerial debut in 44-degree weather with gusts up to 26 miles an hour. It was warm inside the Brewers' clubhouse, though.

"I'm very, very pleased and happy about it," Crandall said. "It's just a beginning, but it's a win and that's what's important."

The Brewers tallied in the second, third and eighth innings on run-scoring singles by Ellie Rodriguez, George Scott and Mike Ferraro. That was more than enough for Lockwood, even though the 25-year-old right-hander struggled with his control, losing his shutout in the sixth when Torres singled following two walks.

Boston's Ray Culp throttled Baltimore on three hits and Carlton Fisk and Tommy Harper homered off Mike Cuellar as the Red Sox ended the Orioles' four-game winning streak and dropped them into a first-place tie with Detroit in the AL East.

Salmon-Feeding Project Under Way on Goldstream

After a lengthy delay imposed by the tardy spring and after-effects of severe flooding, the Amalgamated Conservation Society's fry-feeding project is under way in the Goldstream.

Approximately 100 volunteer workers from seven Greater Victoria outdoor clubs — Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association, RCN Anglers' Association, Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association, South Vancouver Island Rangers, Native Sons, Pacific Trollers Association and the Victoria Canoe Club — will be feeding salmon fry this summer.

Eventually, the aim is to more than double the coho production of the Goldstream.

But the project also has larger goals. Howard English, and ACS spokesman who is co-ordinating the project, explained:

"It's centred on the Goldstream at the moment but we're thinking in broader terms of fish building... of trying to improve the fishing on Vancouver Island. Eventually, if the program should prove viable, we hope that any club in B.C. could pick it up and under the proper supervision apply it to their own streams."

As a bonus, this involvement of concerned individuals seems to provide one of the surest forms of protection to a stream.

The late hatch and flood, however, complicated matters in the Goldstream.

"For this program to have maximum effectiveness you want a high density of fry," said English. "The effects of the flood indicate that we can not expect the same high contrast between fed fry and non-fed because the density will be much lower."

"There's no question that flood damage has seriously reduced the number of fry in the stream."

Perhaps it is lucky that the Goldstream had a high escapement of spawning salmon last fall.

Even though the concentration of fry is smaller this year, all is not lost.

"In the long range this will be a most useful comparison with our more favorable conditions where we have a high density of fry," said English. "This is all valuable information to firm this program up and see whether it is valid."

An early indication of the program's effectiveness can be found in the fry-feeding project operated under an Opportunity grant for Youth grant on De Mamel and Tugwell creeks in Sooke last year. The number of fry surviving to September 1 in fed areas were approximately three times the number surviving in unfed control areas. In addition, the fry were three times larger than might be expected.

English said the project aims eventually at getting 30,000 smolts down the three mile long Goldstream and into the sea, instead of the normal 10,500.

This would mean that the adult coho population available to the sports and commercial fisheries as well as spawning escapement would rise from 2,100 to more than 5,100 fish.

Under natural conditions, as they exist at present, the Goldstream may be expected to produce up to 100,000 fry of which less than 11,000 survive the year before migrating to the sea as smolts.

The lowest water level of the summer acts like a funnel, allowing only a certain number of fish to stay alive. Any surplus fry the stream is unable to feed during this time migrate to the sea early and are lost.

A feeding program keeps these surplus fry in the deeper pools before they are pushed out through competition.

Several sections of Goldstream and the lower end of Waugh Creek have been set aside as control areas where there will be no feeding.

Tests will be conducted on fry numbers in the fed and unfed areas, growth rates and conditions will be monitored and some of the advanced fry will be marked and tagged. Other checks will be kept on seaward displacement of smolts following the end of feeding and water temperature in the stream.

Through co-operation with the water board, tests will be made to make sure the feeding isn't affecting the quality of the water — although the food pellets are guaranteed to be non-polluting and free of salmonella bacteria.

Sanction by the provincial and federal fisheries departments was obtained for the project and individuals not connected to clubs can help as well by purchasing tickets in the VSIAA's Goldstream Conservation Derby on June 25.

The tickets are now available at 25 cents each or five for $1 from Saanich Inlet boathouses and most sporting goods stores. It's a chance to stand up and be counted.

SANDWICH, England (CP) — Michael Bonallack, British Walker Cup captain and five-time winner of the British amateur golf championship, narrowly edged Simon Bryles of Britain Tuesday to advance into the third round of this year's amateur championship event.

Bonallack trailed Bryles by three holes with five remaining but came back to win on the final hole.

Another highlight of play was the four-under-par round of David Robertson, a 14-year-old Scottish schoolboy who defeated Peter Van Ingen of the United States.

The Scottish boys champion, easily the youngest player in the tournament, was four under par after 13 holes and whipped Van Inge, 21, of Locust Valley, N.Y., 7 and 5 on the 6,633-yard, par 70 Royal St. George's course.

PUTTS SUPERBLY

Young Robertson amazed Van Inge and the small gallery. He smacked the ball long and straight down every fairway and rolled in putts from the edges of the greens.

The 5-foot-3, 170-pounder canned a 30-foot putt for a birdie at the fifth hole and a 25-footer for an eagle three at the 490-yard seventh.

Among Canadians, Paul Williams of Burlington, Ont., and J. Pappin were eliminated in the first round with their respective competitors, F. Cooney of Britain and W. H. Marcuson of the U.S., advancing to the second round.

Also in the first round, D.C. Nankeville of Britain beat A. MacMillan of Canada 2 and 1 and J. A. Fischer of Britain beat J. K. Mitchell of Canada 6 and 4.

In the second round, A. D. Ferguson of Britain beat Robert Plommer of Vancouver 1 up.

Kustaski Bolsters McDonalds

Victoria McDonald's will be bolstered by the return of last year's most valuable player tonight as they try and increase their narrow, first-place lead by playing Coquitlam J-Hawks on the Mainland.

Twenty-year-old Jerry Kustaski has returned from Europe and has been playing with McDonald's junior "B" club for the last 10 days to get in shape for his return to the "A" club.

The high-scoring defenceman-forward will be a welcome addition to Victoria as they try and stay ahead of Burnaby and Richmond both just one point back of the leaders.

Burnaby, the only team to beat Victoria this season, meet McDonald's in a key game Thursday at 8 p.m. at Memorial Arena.

It will be "kids' night" at the Arena and the first 400 youngsters (14 and under) accompanied by an adult will be admitted free.

Morgan Gets Open Berth

TORONTO (CP) — At least 11 Canadian pros including John Morgan of Victoria, and two amateurs will not have to qualify for the $150,000 Canadian Open golf tournament at Cherry Hill, near Welland, Ont., in July, in accordance with a new system of exemptions announced Tuesday by the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association.

The system, which eliminates regional qualifying rounds in effect last year, could expand the number of Canadians eligible for the Open so that they make up about one-sixth of the 144-man field.

Nine of the 12 spots assigned to the CPGA go to winners or high-point players from last year's Canadian tour.

They include Gary Pitchford, Toronto, Atlantic Open; Moe Norman, Gilford, Ont., second in the Manitoba Open; Tom Tremblay, Brantford, playoff winner in Saskatchewan Open; Bill Wright Jr., Edmonton, Alberta Open; Wayne Vollmer, Vancouver, British Columbia Open; WHF Homenuk, Winnipeg, CPGA champion; Gary Slatter, Burlington, Ont., CPGA runnerup; Ben Kern, Port Credit, Ont., low Canadian in 1971 Canadian Open; and Morgan.

Morgan qualifies as top point man behind the other exempt players.

George Knudson, Toronto, has a U.S. tour exemption and Al Balding, Toronto, a sponsor's exemption from the Royal Canadian Golf Association, which also assigned the two amateur exemptions to Nick Weslock of Burlington and Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont.

Since Kern, Homenuk and Vollmer are on the U.S. tour, they could win exemptions there and open the way to three other Canadian alternates to compete in the Canadian Open.

The alternates, says Dave Zineck of the sponsors of the Canadian tour, would be picked from the high points scorers on 1972 tour.

In addition, winners of next week's Ontario Open, the Quebec Open June 23-25, and this year's Atlantic Open June 16-18 will join the exempted list.

Timely Hitting Helps Seaboard to 12th Win

Seaboard Construction produced hits when they were needed Wednesday and recorded their 12th straight victory in the Major Men's Softball League.

Seaboard, which holds a five-game advantage over second-place Nanaimo, wound up with just one more hit than its rival but came through in the clutch for a five-run explosion in the sixth inning en route to a 7-1 triumph over Brentwood Butler Brothers at Central Park.

Dave Low cracked a double and Peter Isaacson and Scott Sinclair smashed singles to drive in runs during the sixth-inning uprising. Catcher Paul Morrison drove in the final two runs with a double.

Seaboard's timely hitting earned pitcher Barry Wilkin his fifth straight victory. He tossed a seven-hitter but lost his shutout after being tagged for a solo homer by Reg Underwood in the sixth inning.

Labatts of the Stuffy McGinnis League meet Seaboard in an exhibition game tonight at 6:45 p.m. at Central.

N-Power Hazards Stressed

Nuclear power for British Columbia would be "hazardous, costly, unreliable and completely unnecessary," former B.C. Hydro co-chairman Hugh Keenleyside said Tuesday.

Keenleyside told a meeting of the Men's Canadian Club that nuclear power in this province at this time would be an unreliable alternative to power sources already available.

He and present chairman Gordon Shrum at one time were co-administrators of the provincial Hydro authority. Shrum is an advocate of nuclear power.

Keenleyside said the country's only operating nuclear plant, at Pickering, Ont., has worked out well, but has been functioning too short a time to overcome the basic drawback of fear.

"Of three machines there, one has been in operation one year, the second seven months and the third one month," he said.

"That's good, but insufficient to overcome concern about reliability."

Keenleyside predicted that by 1980 the U.S. would be using one-sixth of its inland water resources to cool nuclear reactors, and that the figure would rise to one-half in low run-off periods.

He said nuclear advocates should not be considered "crackpots," but said he did not agree with their approach to power questions.

He is a member of the provincial government-sponsored B.C. Energy Board, which is due to report on energy problems in the province Sept. 1.

Legal Aid Programs 'Insufficient'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Civil Liberties Association told Justice Minister Otto Lang Tuesday that existing legal aid programs are insufficient.

In a brief submitted to the minister, A. Alan Borovoy, general counsel for the CCLA, said one of the most fundamental safeguards which stands between individual freedom and the power of the state is the individual's right to legal counsel.

Borovoy said the CCLA conducted a survey of the administration of criminal justice in five Canadian cities.

"Of the 553 surveyed accused persons ... as large a number as 240 or 43.4 per cent went through provincial courts without legal counsel," he said.

The cities in which the survey took place were Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Borovoy said representation in court is only part of the problem concerning legal counsel.

"Many accused people require and seek legal counsel at a much earlier stage of the proceedings," he said, but police practices have prevented a large number from getting it.

"More than 30 per cent of the arrested persons who requested it were denied the opportunity to make a telephone call from custody," he said.

About 76 per cent were questioned by police before consultation with counsel, he added.

'Flying camp' ready for coast trail move

Trail Work Awaits B.C. Word

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A work camp will be airlifted along the 50-mile West Coast Trail during its reconstruction.

The project, which awaits only B.C. government approval, will be carried out between Port Renfrew and Bamfield and is the third phase of Pacific Rim National Park development.

The "flying camp" — as park officials call it — is being assembled at Tofino airport. It consists of several self-contained units: a kitchen, washroom, dining room, sleeping quarters and workshops.

As work progresses along the trail, the entire camp will be airlifted by helicopter to appropriate locations.

"We are ready to move whenever we receive the go-ahead signal," park superintendent George Trachuck said.

"We are not thinking in terms of building a trail for hardy hikers," he added. "The trail will be constructed so that any person can walk it without difficulty."

The project will entail reconstructing many broken bridges, wooden steps and ramps.

Campsites will be established along the trail.

The trail is expected to attract more than 50,000 visitors a year. Last year about 5,000 walked the trail.

The historic trail was maintained in earlier days to rescue shipwrecked mariners on the rugged west coast. It has remained largely unchanged since the days of Capt. George Vancouver who explored island waters in the latter half of the 18th century.

The B.C. government has proposed a half-mile buffer zone to preserve its natural beauty but conservationists have asked that this be extended to one-and-a-half miles.

Logging companies are opposed to extending the buffer zone.

Hydro Unveils Tab for Gas

VANCOUVER (CP) — A B.C. Hydro official conceded Tuesday that the utility's tariff for supplying natural gas to Vancouver Island will probably be unacceptable to potential industrial consumers.

George Barnett, manager of Hydro's rates and costs department, made the statement in response to questioning at a Public Utilities Commission hearing in Vancouver into rival schemes by Hydro and four other companies to pipe gas to the Island.

Barnett said Hydro's proposed rate schedule includes an industrial rate of 52 cents for 1,000 cubic feet.

Further questioning by commission counsel D. M. Goldie established that industries using bunker C oil, another type of fuel, would prefer oil to natural gas, providing the price of oil stays at the current rate of about $3.50 a barrel.

Barnett also said that the 52-cent price quoted for gas would only apply to those users willing to accept interruptions in service during the cold-weather months of November to April. He said the interruptions would not amount to more than 10 per cent of total service time when averaged out over the year.

He added, however, that the 10 per cent figure might be exceeded during winter months.

In other developments Tuesday, PUC Chairman D. J. F. English said a request that the hearing be adjourned until after the outcome of a Hydro application to the provincial treasury board will be considered after Hydro has completed its gas line case.

Hydro is seeking treasury board approval for a $40 million project to lay additional underwater electric power cables to the Island.

Even Grits Unhappy With Takeover Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal MPs from Toronto gave the Liberal government clearly to understand Tuesday that its proposed foreign takeover legislation is not an adequate response to foreign ownership of the economy.

The point was registered by two Toronto Liberals in the second day of Commons debate on the legislation. Prime Minister Trudeau has described the legislation as the longest step the government is prepared to take for the time being to deal with foreign domination of Canadian industry.

A third Toronto MP, Charles Caccia (L-Davenport), couched his support of the bill in terms of it being a preliminary to other and stronger measures.

From Ian Wain (L-St. Paul's), however, came a stern warning that "Canadians will feel little but dismay if the government puts this measure forward as its final statement of policy in this field."

He added that "it is most important that the government indicate clearly that this particular bill is in fact merely one measure in such a continuing program to regain control of our economy."

The comment drew from Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin an indignant protest that he had stated as much while introducing the legislation for second reading debate Monday.

"That certainly is a real advance but it is not the end," retorted Mr. Wain.

While Mr. Wain said he would support the bill, he made clear his feeling that it should have gone at least as far as the report on foreign investment and ownership issued in 1970 by the House external affairs committee.

The report of the committee, which Mr. Wain heads as chairman, urged strong controls on the operation of multi-national corporations in Canada and set the aim of 51-per cent Canadian ownership of industry.

Steve Otto (L-York East) suggested that the authors of the proposed legislation have been naive.

He said he would vote for the takeover bill if only because its provisions would give the government some notion of weaknesses in existing financial institutions. But the bill has loopholes a mile wide, he said, and does not touch on the basic reforms that are needed.

The Liberal critics of the legislation were given an unkind review by Sam Schumacher (PC-Palliser), himself no advocate for the bill though for much different reasons.

He suggested that the Toronto Liberals were afraid of the influence of the Committee for an Independent Canada, which sent telegrams to all MPs Monday demanding much stronger legislation.

The committee, while drawing membership from across the country, is identified largely with such Torontonians as former finance minister Walter Gordon and publisher Jack McClelland. The telegram was signed, however, by Toronto Conservative lawyer Edwin Goodman.

That the Conservative opposition is itself far from unanimous in its approach to the issue of foreign ownership was clear from the comments of Mr. Schumacher and other party members.

He questioned the constitutionality of the legislation and worried that it would give Mr. Pepin "too much discretion to decide what is good for Canada."

His emphasis was on the need for particular measures, especially in the tax field, to encourage Canadians to increase domestic investments.

Greater consultation between the federal and provincial governments was also a concern of David MacDonald (PC-Egmont).

OTTO
... author, naive

But his approach focused on creation of a national agency, with representatives from the federal and provincial governments, the academic and business communities, to deal with all matters bearing on the issue of economic independence.

"There has to be a vehicle which will get us beyond the present situation where we have this kind of ad hoc, instant and somewhat peripheral solution to a very serious and major question facing the Canadian people," he said.

A much stronger denunciation of government policy and the bill was offered by Douglas Rowland (NDP-Selkirk) who said the legislation is "nothing but a sham and a hoax, a cynical effort to diffuse the issue of economic nationalism before an election is called—nothing more and nothing less."

The New Democrats have appeared united in their opposition to the bill during the two days of debate but they did not go unscathed Tuesday.

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette devoted most of his time to scoring discrepancies between the party's nationalist rhetoric and the actions of NDP governments in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

He said the NDP administrations are mortgaging the futures of their provinces by borrowing heavily in U.S. money markets.

Mr. Caouette also had critical comments for Mr. Pepin. The minister, he implied, was altogether too anxious to end the debate, obtain second reading of the legislation and hustle it off to committee for examination.

The debate continues today.

Soviets Want Trade Hike To Canada

TORONTO (CP)—The Soviet Union wants to increase its exports to Canada to offset a balance of trade weighted in Canada's favor, a Soviet spokesman said Tuesday.

N. W. Smeljakov, speaking through an interpreter, said his country would like to develop markets for machine tools and other products.

Mr. Smeljakov is heading a five-man mission that is visiting machine, steel and heavy machinery plants in Canada.

Soviet exports to Canada in 1971 totalled $12.6 million while Canadian exports to the Soviet Union totalled $125.8 million, of which $110 million was accounted for by wheat sales. Ontario-based plants sold $5.5 million of products to the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Union would like to sell machine tools to Canada and steel products as well as farm machinery, Mr. Smeljakov said. In return it would like to import oil drilling machinery, machinery for tractor construction, food packaging and the pulp and paper industry.

Canadian interest has been expressed in Soviet-made, high-purity steel slabs and other steel products, Mr. Smeljakov said. Alcan Aluminum Ltd. of Montreal would like a licence to produce the slabs, he said.

CANADA LIKES MBFR IDEA

BONN (CP) — Four little letters—MBFR—have caused a great stir in the sessions held here over the last two days by the NATO council of ministers.

The French don't seem enthusiastic about them, but other delegations—including the Canadian—do.

Mutual and balanced force reductions therefore have become a subject for diplomats of what is a lively series of verbal exchanges.

The Canadians here say the very idea of a European security treaty between Communist and non-Communist countries would be illusory without reductions in the military forces that eye one another across the line that divides this continent.

But achieving this will involve some highly delicate negotiations, a process which might start with exploratory East-West talks in Helsinki next November.

Yet External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp of Canada has suggested it's possible to stabilize the European situation even without actually reducing the military forces here.

For instance, arrangements can be made for notification by one side being given to the other about any intention to conduct military manoeuvres.

There can be arrangements as well for mutual military surveillance, and the posting of observers, all efforts made in the cause of increasing the confidence of both sides that sinister military machinations by opposing forces are not in the making.

This is the kind of pragmatic approach to the tensions problem which Canada is trying to propagate.

Moreover, in an apparent continuation of Canada's traditional diplomatic role as a conciliator, the men from Ottawa have made much in Bonn of a "group" approach to the exploratory talks on arms reductions.

Recently the Russians turned down the idea of an exploratory visit to Moscow by Manlio Brosio, then NATO secretary-general, on the subject of mutual force reductions.

The Russians objected that they didn't want any "bloc-

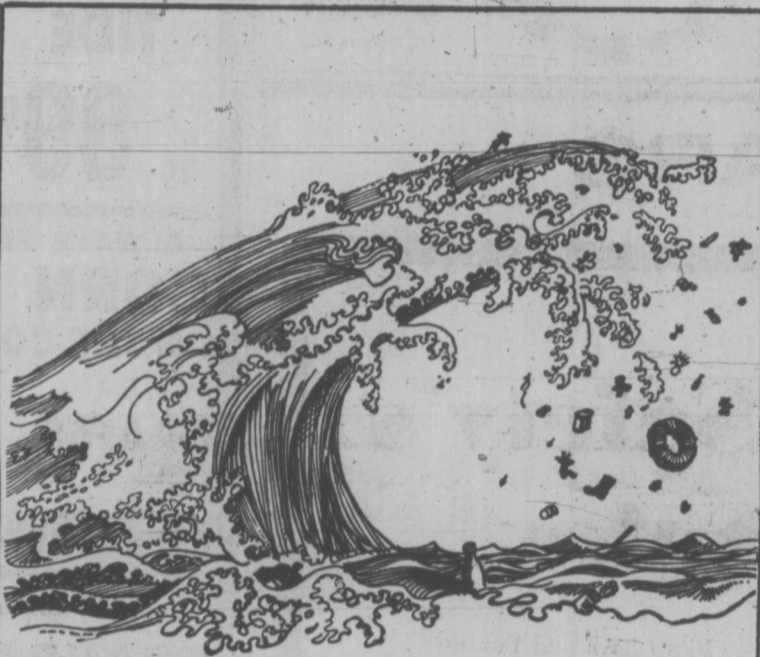

-to-bloc" talks on the subjects and they claimed this was what the projected Brosio visit implied.

Now the Canadians are suggesting "group"—as opposed to bloc—talks between East and West on the reductions issue.

They mean that, on the Western side, a number of the NATO countries, but apparently not all, would participate in the exploratory stage of the discussions.

Most of the NATO countries seemed agreed, as of Tuesday night, that the initial discussions about arms talks affecting Central Europe should be held as a parallel development to the broader idea of a European security conference.

U.S. Assists Bangladesh

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. state department Tuesday announced a $90 million grant to Bangladesh in the first direct assistance to that country since it proclaimed its independence from Pakistan more than a year ago.

The bilateral aid agreement was signed in Dacca Tuesday. It provides $50 million for imports of bulk commodities including cotton, tallow, pesticides and fertilizer and $40 million for engineering projects such as construction of flood works, restoration of power supplies and rebuilding of roads and bridges.

SHELTERS BOMB OUT

TORONTO (CP) — Many private bomb shelters built here 10 or 15 years ago have been transformed into wine cellars, closets or swimming pool change rooms.

Some just remain unused, relics of the nuclear war panic created in the late 1950s and early 1960s by the international crisis in Berlin and Cuba.

Marion Otto, one of several Metro residents with shelters interviewed Monday, said her family uses its shelter as a changing room for a backyard pool.

Tilda Forbes and her husband, Doug, moved into a west-end house in which the previous owner had built a shelter.

"We didn't even know about it when we moved in," said Mrs. Forbes. "We found it behind a false wall. Now it floods down there every spring and fall."

Peter Ramsky, who also inherited his shelter from the previous owner of his house, uses it as a closet and considers it "a ridiculous thing."

But, Mike Tychovsky keeps food and other essentials in his shelter, and wonders if other shelter owners are being too light-hearted.

Henry and the Belly Dancer

TEHRAN — Henry Kissinger met a belly dancer early today and she ended up in his lap.

The raven-haired beauty, Nadine Paima, aged 28, performing for several hundred journalists and government officials at a dinner party given by the information ministry when President Nixon's bachelor aide arrived after midnight.

Still in tails and white tie after the state dinner given for Nixon by the Shah, Kissinger immediately attracted a crowd.

After he and Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveyda were seated on cushions in the hotel ballroom, the dancer, who had been gyrating on the stage, was led over.

Dressed in a shimmering costume, she performed a pulsating dance a few feet from Kissinger and the prime minister.

The dancer kissed the prime minister's cheek and then plopped down in Kissinger's lap.

OTTAWA — The automobile, once a desirable status symbol, has in recent years become a symbol of sudden death, pollution and abandoned wrecks scattered over the landscape.

Dalton Camp has told the Canadian Automobile Association.

Camp, former president of the Progressive Conservative party, said many of the problems now concerning the general public are related to automobiles: pollution, litter, abandoned cars, and urban transportation problems.

Mr. Camp suggested to the association that it would be more effective to direct its persuasive efforts at civil servants rather than politicians.

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Testimony in the Angela Davis trial ended Tuesday with the last witness — father of slain George and Jonathan Jackson — held in contempt of court for refusing to testify.

A defence motion for dismissal of charges was denied.

The prosecution closed its rebuttal case after Lester Jackson told the judge: I buried my only two sons and I don't want to take part in these proceedings, for the preservation of my mental health. He was fined $100.

Judge Richard E. Arnason of Superior Court announced he was denying the defence's request for dismissal of charges, and he set final arguments to begin today.

The defence had asked for a directed verdict of acquittal on grounds of insufficient evidence.

Miss Davis, 28, is on trial for murder kidnap and conspiracy in connection with a Marin County courthouse invasion.

TOKYO — The mayor of Tokyo and his former secretary were married Tuesday and immediately returned to their desks to work.

Gov. Ryukichi Mitsuoka, 68, the Marxist mayor of Tokyo, and Miss Tokiko Inoue, 44, were married without ceremony by registering as man and wife at Shibuya Ward office.

NOTTINGHAM, England — Susan Mary Rose became Britain's — and probably the world's — youngest radio personality the day after she was born.

Her mother, Dr. Jocelyn Rose, 35, recorded a running commentary as she gave birth to nine-pound, seven-ounce Susan Mary for broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corp. Susan Mary's first cries climaxed the broadcast.

WOLLONGONG, Australia — It cost high school teacher Warwick Allen $265 for tweaking a student's nose.

A magistrate in Wollongong, 50 miles south of Sydney, found Allen's action constituted assault. He ordered Allen to pay $263 in costs and $2 compensation for the student's medical expenses. Allen, a physical education teacher at Corrimal High School, called the incident "trifling," and said he had been provoked by the boy's insolent attitude.

SALEM, Ore. — Vietnam veteran Richard Hawkins, 28, said he celebrated Memorial Day by burning his honorable discharge from the army in front of the selective service office.

Hawkins, a student at the University of Oregon at Eugene, said he burned the discharge in a cup "so it wouldn't make any mess." He said he left the ashes and a letter to President Nixon under the doormat of the draft office. In the letter Hawkins said Nixon's Vietnam policy "rips away the last shred of honor attached to the uniform I wore."

British Honors For Mike

LONDON — Former Canadian prime minister Pearson will receive the Victor Gollancz humanity award June 13.

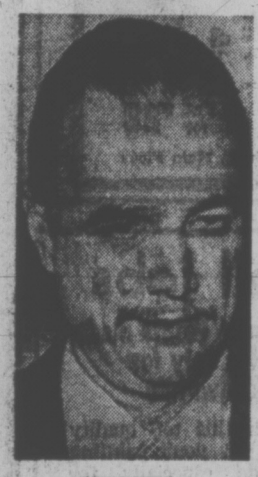

This award, in memory of the late British publisher, is granted each year in recognition of the recipient's outstanding work in the humanitarian field, especially in relation to developing countries.

Pearson, accompanied by his wife, is currently touring the Greek islands and is expected to arrive here for an 11-day visit next week.

His engagements will include a trip to Buckingham Palace June 8 when he will receive the previously announced Order of Merit from the Queen. This is one of the highest honors the Queen can bestow.

PEARSON

HUGHES

Forgotten Again

VANCOUVER — Howard Hughes, who was the topic of almost every conversation here in March, has all but been forgotten by residents of the city 11 weeks after his surprise arrival.

About the only people still showing interest in his continued stay are Canadian Immigration Department officials and executives at the Bayshore Inn, where Hughes pays an estimated $5,200 a week rent.

Press aides sent from Los Angeles to field reporters' questions during the early stages of the billionaire's visit long since have returned home, leaving the wall of secrecy around Hughes intact.

Hughes is in Canada on a three-month visitor's visa and the Immigration Department insists he will have to appear in person at its office to make application to have the visa extended. It expires next week.

"It's up to Mr. Hughes," said Lyall Hawkins, Pacific regional director of immigration. "If he wants to make arrangements to get an extension, he'll have to come down here like anybody else."

"Unless there's a very good reason why he can't come down in person (such as a physical ailment), we expect him to show up, certainly the first time an extension is granted."

Firm Fined $3,000

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta Giftwares Ltd. was found guilty Tuesday in the appellate division of the Alberta Supreme Court on three charges of misleading advertising. It was fined $3,000.

The charges related to three advertisements for sidewalk bicycles in a company catalogue. The charges were dismissed by district court Judge J. S. Cormack last December but appealed by the crown.

Mr. Justice J. M. Cairns said information given to prospective purchasers was misleading, "having in mind what was reported in the catalogue."

The catalogue said that whenever possible the manufacturers' retail prices would be quoted, along with Alberta Giftware prices.

In the three cases, the retail price quoted was found to be higher than the actual manufacturers' prices. The quoted price had indicated to purchasers they were getting merchandise at more of a reduction than was actually the case.

Metis to Meet

REGINA (CP) — A six-day camp in the field overlooking the battleground where Louis Riel and his Indian and Metis followers were defeated in 1885 will be held in July for an estimated 12,000 Metis people, according to Jim Sinclair of Regina.

Sinclair, president of the Metis Society of Saskatchewan, said the meeting July 18 to 23 will combine the discussion of problems with social and recreational events.

Helmet Ruling

CALGARY (CP) — Motorcyclists must wear helmets whenever they sit on their machines, even if they are not running, provincial judge L. A. Justason declared.

He fined Edward G. Miko, 18, $5 and costs for operating a motorcycle without his helmet, although he was sitting in a school parking lot when ticketed.

The word "operate" is a much wider expression than running or driving," said the judge, "and the accused is undoubtedly in this case an operator, even if his motorcycle had to be pushed to run."

MLA Pay Check

EDMONTON (CP) — A citizens' committee will be formed to assess the adequacy of indemnities and expense allowances paid to members of the Alberta legislature.

Deputy Premier Hugh Horner said he would ask the legislature today to approve the appointment of the committee, which will also study the salaries of the speaker, the deputy speaker, the premier, the leader of the opposition and cabinet members.

Wilderness Areas

EDMONTON (CP) — AN ecological system approach will be used in setting up wilderness areas in Alberta, Allan Warrack, minister of lands and forests, told the legislature in introducing amendments to the Wilderness Areas Act.

The amendments remove a 144-square-mile limit on the size of a wilderness area, establish three wilderness areas in the province, and provide for a controlled buffer zone around all or part of a wilderness area.

Grads May Bargain

EDMONTON (CP) — The University of Alberta general faculties council has approved a proposal which could give graduate students collective bargaining rights.

The proposal, which must be approved by the board of governors, would grant the Graduate Students' Association much the same type of bargaining power now held by the academic and non-academic staff associations in their annual contract negotiations.

Pharmacy 'Rights'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba pharmacists must fight for their "professional rights and prerogatives" to counteract the influence of government upon their profession, according to the president of the Manitoba Pharmaceutical Association.

B. A. Lloyd said recent reports by the Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba governments indicate "the swift entrance into the very fabric of our professions, and indeed of all health professions, of government... federal, provincial and municipal."

One Good Trail Deserves Another—Ho

BLAINE, Wash. (AP) — The day a couple of Chinese sailors tried to sneak down the wooded path from Canada into the United States it was inevitable that the place would be dubbed the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

The name is a far cry from the North Vietnamese access to the south, a series of jungle paths so intricate they resemble the veins of the human body.

Washington's Ho Trail is only 250 yards long, flanked by bush, dangerously swampy and so obvious that those who try to cross the border from the Canadian side almost always get caught.

The trail is only a small part of the territory the U.S. Border Patrol and Customs Service police in the constant campaign to plug holes against traffic which includes drug smugglers, army deserters trying to get back home, criminals, undesirable aliens and foreigners unhappy with life where they came from.

In Blaine, the federal authorities concentrate border-sealing efforts with radio links to 12 other ports of entry from Point Roberts to the most easterly at Metlaine Falls.

They have had all kinds and types coming out of the bush or trying to casually bluff their way into the U.S. They include a fairly steady supply of ship jumpers.

In 1970 for instance, 78 Chinese jumped ship in British Columbia seaports and tried various ways of slipping south, only to get caught. Last year, the figure dropped to 59.

Since last November, there have been only three, says Armand A. Hysette, chief patrol agent at Blaine, and two of them were caught in New York.

The traffic has reduced sharply since federal agents smashed a ring which had smuggled as many as 2,500 mainland Chinese across the northern frontier annually for as much as $1,000 a head, officials say.

Greeks are numbered among the steady customers, perhaps a reflection of the uncertain political conditions in Athens.

The patrol reported 80 Greek ship deserters in 1970, 89 in 1971 and a count of 31 already in the early months of this year.

In between regular crossing points there are small arteries such as deep ditches, farm paths, and power-line service roads.

The power line is almost foolproof, though. Electric eyes spot anything moving along it and send the message to the patrols.

The Ho Chi Minh spot seems an easy, short route and that is as deceptive as its Indochinese counterpart.

On both sides are treacherous swampy woods guarded with electric eyes and sand traps smoothed out to tip off any fresh footprints. Some trespassers try to get smart and work through brush, only to lose.

It's eerie, once you step off that trail," an agent said.

"The sounds of highway traffic disappear and one gets confused easily. One of our own agents got lost and had to use his walkie-talkie to get out."

Seafront Walkway Approved

A plan to open up the waterfront in the West Bay area by building a seafront walkway from Barnard Avenue to Maitland Street was approved in principle by city council's planning committee Tuesday.

Committee was told the proposed $48,500 promenade would run across the front of two apartment developments, the Diamond Developments property and the adjacent Princess Patricia tower.

City manager Bill Hooson said in a report the plan, prepared for consideration by the federal authorities, envisages the recovery for public use of the foreshore area which was encroached upon during the construction of the apartment buildings.

The promenade would fit in with the city's plan for a park on the Barnard Estate, recently acquired from the federal government, and could later be extended to Robert Street, he said.

The plan will now be sent to Ottawa for approval, and Hooson said after the meeting that the question of cost will have to be negotiated by the federal government and the developers concerned.

There have been investigations at both the local and federal levels in recent months of alleged encroachment on the foreshore by the two developments.

Silver Threads Head Lauds Fare Cut

The B.C. government plan to reduce senior citizens' bus fares is "a step in the right direction" according to Silver Threads director Mrs. Pauline Barker.

Mrs. Barker disagreed with an Amalgamated Transit Union spokesman who said Tuesday that the provincial government's plan to reduce senior citizen's bus fares is "just not good enough."

"I don't agree its just not enough, its a step in the right direction," she said.

ATU business agent Bill Link said in Vancouver Monday all old-age pensioners should be able to ride British Columbia Hydro buses free.

"A five dollar fee for passes should also be lifted on July 1," Link said.

"It is time the provincial government recognized the contribution senior citizens have made to this city and this province, he added.

Mrs. Barker said she would like to see free bus transport for senior citizens but "we just wonder how it could ever be afforded by the government."

She praised the fare reductions saying "it benefits everyone."

Premier W. A. C. Bennett announced last week that pensioners' fares on single zone rides will be reduced from 25 cents to 15 cents, and from 40 cents to 25 cents for inter-zone trips.

In addition, restrictions on travelling hours will be lifted for needy pensioners holding a special $5, six-month pass.

NO CONFLICT SEEN IN JEWISH LOYALTY

HAMILTON (CP) — Manitoba's chief justice says there need be no conflict between a Canadian Jew's loyalty to Canada and his allegiance to Israel.

"They are concentric forms of allegiance," Mr. Justice Samuel Freedman told guests at the city's annual Negev dinner, which recognizes the achievements of Hamilton-area Jews.

He called on Canadians to adopt a positive patriotism toward this country and refrain from too much self-criticism.

Mr. Justice Freedman, a Jew, also said he believes Israel will come to "mean something special — not only to Jews but to the world as well."

"Perhaps a new moral and intellectual fire will be kindled there for all mankind."

Above All, It Is Best to Follow the Rules

By JEANNETTE SMYTH
Special to the Times

WASHINGTON — The first clue is the photograph on the book jacket. Amy Vanderbilt, arbiter of manners, the sage who writes that "a well-groomed woman is carefully girdled, if necessary, from the time she gets up in the morning until she undresses for the night," is wearing an unusually interesting dress on that book jacket. It is the sort of tucked, embroidered, white, antique-looking dress a bare-foot bride would be glad to get her hands on.

The second clue is that Doubleday, the publisher, is hyping the mod, mod, mod modern revisions in the new 20th-anniversary update of Amy Vanderbilt's Etiquette.

They're sending out press releases, which lead with the statement that the book — almost 200 pages longer than the last major revision in 1967 — "reflects social change." The releases end up with the statement that Miss Vanderbilt can stand on her head.

Inside, the new $86-page reference book now has less about how to dress your butler and what to wear for an audience with the Pope than it has about how to deal with such new social phenomena as snowmobiling, premarital sex, and marijuana.

The index of the 1967 version discreetly skirts over these topics — "smorgasbord, snails, social behavior for children," and "serving procedures, sexton (funeral fees to), shades in the guest room," and "marchioness (forms of address), marine corps, maritime terms."

Weekly Help

In the new revision, the section on weddings has been cut 43 pages, but remains — at 63 pages — the largest of the book. The chapter called "gracious living without servants" has been cut from 10 to three pages, with Miss Vanderbilt saving her most venomous remarks for the casual habits of weekly help (joint checking accounts are her number two enemy).

In 1967, she ended her "gracious living and etc." chapter with "extra guests at the desert course," but the 1972 version ends with a few words on women's liberation under the heading "division of labor."

Writes Vanderbilt: "Women's lib aside (and it does make some important points, at that), the division of labor between husband and wife, mother and children, becomes increasingly important as women seek more complete expression and life fulfillment. There should be no reason why the mother of a household should have all the backbreaking chores, previously labeled solely women's work."

Dope, sex, and snowmobiles may be new to the concept of etiquette, but the core of essential advice — the ethic itself — is probably as old as civilization. Etiquette is order (a word Miss Vanderbilt uses often), and order makes you feel good.

In the new book Miss Vanderbilt claims, on page 337, that religion and politics are still not topics for polite dinner-table conversation. The reason is that they're still not rational or orderly enough to conform to etiquette's ethic.

Old Ethic

If it's not as old as civilization, Miss Vanderbilt's ethic is at least as old as Richard A. Wells. In 1890, Wells wrote a book called Manners, Culture and Dress of the Best American Society, including Social, Commercial and Legal Forms, Letter Writing, Invitations, etc., also Valuable Suggestions on Self Culture and Home Training. Wells didn't have anything to say about dope, sex, and snowmobiles, but what he said about their Victorian equivalents is much like what Miss Vanderbilt writes 82 years later.

Both Wells and Miss Vanderbilt's advice is based on virtues of kindness, sweet reason and good old American horse-sense.

"Since vulgarity has had its way as extensively among us," Wells writes, "every youth begins to smoke and spit before he has well cut his teeth." In his chapter the toilette, Wells condemns tobacco, along with "toothwashes and powders," which he says corrode the enamel.

On the use of marijuana, Miss Vanderbilt also exorcises its popularity among the young, but she attributes its popularity to a "drug-oriented society" rather than to "vulgarity."

"Without moralizing," she writes, "teach your children before they are exposed to temptation, using information on the effects of drugs that will surely at some time be offered to them."

Both Wells and Vanderbilt advocate a forward-looking prudence in their arguments against sexual promiscuity and premarital sex. Both say such activity leads to painful mental crises if your partner decamps, or is unsuitable.

Under the heading "demonstrations of affection," Wells writes, "it may be well to hint that a lady should not be too demonstrative of her affection during the days of her engagement. There is always some chance of a ship "twist" cup and lip, and overt demonstrations of love are not pleasant to remember by a young lady if the man to whom they are given by any chance fails to become her husband."

Miss Vanderbilt, with 1970s liberalism, conceded that psychic harm is only "possible."

"Young people, like mature ones," she writes, under "sex in college," "need to understand that they have responsibilities to society not to produce children out of wedlock, not to use their bodies promiscuously with resulting possible damage to their psyches and health."

Premarital Sex

In 1967, she had written, under "behavior during engagements" for engaged people of all ages, society expects chaperonage of a kind.

In the 1972 revision, that paragraph has been replaced with "while it is my conviction that decisions about premarital sexual relations are a private matter which each couple must decide for themselves... they should exercise considerable discretion in their conduct."

Both the 1967 and 1972 versions end with the same paragraph, though, which — even to the use of a homely metaphor — sounds like Richard A. Wells. "If these rules seem hard and conventional to modern young people," writes Vanderbilt, "they should remind themselves that the engagement is a trial flight which can easily end in a crash landing. It is best to follow the rules."

The 1972 revision also has a new chapter on "second and subsequent marriages," which cites the statistics that one in four marriages end in divorce and makes such statements as "whereas once it was absolutely taboo for a woman marrying a second time to wear a white dress, this is now acceptable, provided the dress does not resemble a wedding gown."

No Need for Sex

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "HUNGRY FOR LOVE" made me wince.

For 11 years I was married to a charming, kind, bright and sweet man who had little or no need for sex. But my desire made him uncomfortable, then angry, finally hostile.

"Surely there is something wrong with me," I thought. "I must be oversexed. What is normal? Once a day? Once a week? Once a year? I didn't know."

My physician suggested a psychiatrist for each of us. We each spend several years on the couch, after which my husband died of a tumor of the pituitary gland — undiagnosed.

After 15 years of marriage to my present husband I learned much about life and sex. To put it succinctly, "If one has an itch, he will find a way to scratch it."

A disinterested husband who has no "itch," may be "psychically sick. Look for a medical cause, not a psychological one. — Been There in Trenton.

DEAR BEEN THERE: A psychiatrist is first of all a medical doctor, and one who is competent will look for both medical and psychological reasons.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 17 years, have two wonderful teen-agers and a darling 6-year-old. When I found out that my husband was having an affair with his secretary, I nearly had a nervous breakdown.

He admitted everything, begged for forgiveness, said he still loves me, and wants to keep our family together. He also said she didn't mean a thing to him.

The secretary no longer works for my husband. In fact, she is married now.

My husband told me he couldn't go on if I divorced him, but I don't think I can ever really forgive and forget. Also, I want to do what's best for the children. What do you advise? Crushed.

DEAR CRUSHED: Try a little positive thinking. Think in terms of forgiving, and you will. And one way of forgetting is to never mention it again.

New Ombudsman Service

Victoria's Status of Women Action Group is now offering an ombudsman service which will act on behalf of people who feel they are suffering discrimination in housing or employment.

SWAG president Kathleen Ruff said in an interview that her organization has frequently been asked for this type of help in the past.

"We have helped by giving information but now feel it is necessary to do more," she said.

Mrs. Ruff says that although legislation exists forbidding discrimination on the basis of sex, "some women are afraid to trust the law."

"Women are often intimidated because they fear retaliation," Mrs. Ruff explained. "We can stand behind women suffering discrimination and speak out."

Mrs. Ruff says the help offered by her group will range from "peaceful, diplomatic persuasion to out and out protest or picketing if necessary."

"If the offender is a national company, we can enlist the help of women's groups across Canada," she said.

Mrs. Ruff believes that, by speaking out and fighting discrimination, SWAG will encourage other women to stand up for themselves.

"The climate is changing and women are now beginning to question the customary restraints and disadvantages placed on them," she said.

"In the past, women who questioned the attitude of society have been picked off one by one. Those women who did manage to succeed in spite of discrimination frequently closed their eyes, ears and hearts to the general bleak outlook faced by the majority of women."

Mrs. Ruff says any woman who feels she is suffering discrimination may call 477-3549 or 598-1330 for help, advice and support.

SWAG does not discriminate on the grounds of sex when it comes to offering support for victims of discrimination.

The group recently sent a letter to Rosemary Brown, ombudswoman for the Status of Women Council in Vancouver, commending her efforts on behalf of a young man denied employment as a bank teller on the basis of sex.

In her letter Mrs. Ruff said: "We agree that the case of the young man refused employment as a bank teller well illustrates the fact that men are denied the right to employment in certain areas of the work force."

"In banks, for example, 90 per cent of female employees enjoy the privilege of working in the under $5,000 wage category, whereas only 28 per cent of the men have this right."

"It is indeed inequitable that low-paying, dead-end categories of work should be the exclusive domain of the female sex."

"A bank manager was quoted on the radio as saying in regard to the case, that 'any man who wanted a job as a bank teller needed his head examined.'"

"We feel that this is not the only head that needs examining in this situation. We pledge ourselves to work to end this inexcusable discrimination against men."

SWAG has also asked the B.C. Telephone Company to change the manner in which subscribers are listed in the Victoria telephone book.

The group would like the telephone listing to recognize the existence of the wife as a distinct individual.

Women's Centre Operates On Youth Grant

A centre devoted to women in Victoria will get underway this week with a two-day open house.

The Victoria Women's Centre will be open Thursday evening and again Friday afternoon and evening, and all women in the city are invited to attend. The centre is located at 1551 Oak Bay Ave., at the junction of Fort St. — where Atman Books used to be located.

The centre has been organized by eight women and financed by a $12,340 Opportunities for Youth grant.

A variety of services will be provided to meet the needs of women in the city.

"The main focus is a drop-in centre where people can come and relax," said Pat Blakeman, one of the organizers. The group has been busy painting and decorating and finding furniture for the room.

"I think that women need to discover each other," said Pat.

A small library of books of special interest to women is being gathered for the centre — books like Kate Millet's Sexual Politics and Germaine Greer's The Female Eunuch, as well as information about women's health problems.

Study groups may be organized on child care, women's health problems or women's studies, if enough interest is shown. Two of the organizers will be researchers providing information for the study groups.

The centre will publish a newsletter listing upcoming events of interest to women in the area, and is hoping to have guest speakers throughout the summer.

At the open house, the organizers hope to have a display of art done by local women. They hope the centre will be used over the summer to display art works and crafts women have produced.

Informal classes in the art of batik, repairing cars, and carpentry are now being organized. And any women's group that needs a meeting place can use the centre free of charge. Phone number is 385-3843.

The youth grant lasts only until September 15. After that, the survival of the Victoria Women's Centre will depend on its success over the summer, and whether more funds can be raised.

"We've got to see how feasible it is in Victoria," said Sharon Gray, another organizer. "There has to be a need, and I think there is."

Babe in Womb Payment Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Family allowances should be paid for children who are still in their mothers' wombs, MP Warren Allmand (L-Montreal-Notre-Dame-de-Grace) told the Commons health committee this week.

He added that as far as he could tell, nothing in the present or proposed family allowance plans bars an expectant mother for claiming an allowance "as soon as the child was conceived."

Health department officials told the committee they know of no provisions stating benefits can only be paid after the child is born.

But one department lawyer said there is a requirement that allowances can only be paid for children resident in Canada.

"I don't think a child before it is born is considered to be resident anywhere,"

The committee was debating the government's bill to set up a new family allowance system, under which maximum benefits would be raised but families would lose benefits in stages as their income increased.

Mr. Allmand said medical studies show that what the mother-to-be eats during her pregnancy can affect her child's future development. Payment of benefits starting with conception could give low-income mothers a better diet and thus make their children healthier.

Other suggestions for changes in the proposed system came from Conservative Ambrose Peddle (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador) and New Democrat Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre).

Mr. Peddle complained that a family earning $10,000 a year in Labrador City could buy only as much as a family earning $8,000 in Montreal, because of differences in the cost of living, but the $8,000-a-year family would get much more in family allowances.

He suggested that such differences in purchasing power be taken into account in determining how much a family gets.

Dr. J. W. Williard, deputy minister of the health and welfare department, said it would be extremely complex and difficult to devise a plan that adjusted payments according to cost-of-living differences.

Mr. Knowles took issue with a provision that the allowances could be increased by the government after seven hours' Commons debate. He said the government should be required to raise the allowances every year to match increases in the cost of living.

Mr. Williard said that increases annually based on the cost of living would amount to only a few cents a month for each child.

During the meeting, the committee was told the government will amend its bill to give full benefits for children in public institutions. The bill now provides for half benefits for such children.

SHOPPERS NEED TO BE TAUGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers need more education to cope with the modern marketplace, according to Harold Buchwald, chairman of the Canadian Consumer Council.

The council made public a report presented to Robert Andras, minister of consumer affairs. The main recommendation of the government-appointed advisory council is that "a new and more comprehensive approach should be taken to consumer education in Canada."

This education would be via schools, adult learning, more and better information by the manufacturers and producers, more voluntary consumer group action and more information through the news media.

Mr. Buchwald, a Winnipeg lawyer, told a news conference that Canadian consumers are not as knowledgeable as American consumers.

Individuals needed a lot of counselling about credit and credit needs. And consumers needed to know that they should shop for credit just the same as they should shop for best buys elsewhere.

In some areas, the commodity being sold to the consumer, often with serious psychological side effects, was the good life rather than the product.

Recipes Wanted

Women from the four western provinces are being asked to contribute recipes for a cookbook of Western Canadian foods now being compiled.

Prizes will be given to the 200 recipes selected for the book, a project of Nabob Foods Ltd. Recipes don't have to be original, but must reflect foods and cooking methods used in Western Canada now or in the past.

First prize is $200, second prize $100, third to 10th $25 and the other 150 prizes, $5 each.

Anyone interested in entering a recipe should send it before August 31 to Miss Jean White, Home Services Director, Nabob Foods Ltd., P.O. Box 2170, Vancouver, B.C.

Amendment Helps Housewife Go to Work

Report of the inter-departmental committee established by the federal government to take a hard look at its own departments and to suggest where discriminations could be removed and recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women implemented, was tabled in the House of Commons earlier this month.

In it the committee co-ordinator, Freda L. Paltiel, includes a chapter on education and training of Canadian women.

She points out that although education is a provincial responsibility and direct federal action is limited, programs and projects mentioned in that chapter are new areas where the government is moving to support the educational and training needs of women.

One of these areas is in connection with adult occupational training.

When the Royal Commission on the Status of Women brought down its findings, it said that women trainees under the Adult Occupational Training Act of the Federal Department of Manpower were well below their proportion in the labor force.

It seriously questioned whether women were aware of the program's existence. This could be particularly elizabeth forbes

true, it believed, of married women who would like to return to work but who realized that their skills were outmoded and that they lacked recent experience.

Conditions imposed for granting allowances during training also put many married women at a disadvantage, the Commission said. They couldn't fill the requirements of three years' previous employment.

It therefore recommended that the Adult Occupational Training Act be amended so that full-time household responsibility be equivalent to participation in the labor force in so far as eligibility for training allowances was concerned.

Also that the federal government, in co-operation with provinces and territories, expand and widely advertise the part-time training programs offered by the Department of Manpower and Immigration.

Mrs. Paltiel's inter-departmental committee examined these recommendations as they affected the federal department concerned and discussed with the minister and department heads ways in which they could be implemented.

Result? Minister of Manpower and Immigration Bryce Mackasey (who is also the minister responsible for the status of women) recently tabled in the House of Commons amendments to the Adult Occupational Training Act. And among them was one to remove the requirement that in order to be eligible for a training allowance a person must either have a three-year attachment to the labor force, or have one or more persons wholly or substantially dependent on him or her for support.

Once approved, this legislation would allow any person who is eligible for training (i.e. any person whose age is one year greater than the regular school leaving age in the province of residence) to also be eligible for a training allowance.

It would also remove a major obstacle and vastly improve opportunities for training for women who require it for re-entry into the labor force.

Not only that, Bryce Mackasey indicated in debate that followed tabling of the amendments that this portion of the new act would apply to housewives who would be considered, in that capacity, to have worked a year.

It is of interest to note in Mrs. Paltiel's report that the treasury board, the solicitor-general and manpower and immigration have all implemented certain recommendations of the Royal Commis-

Before you get your car ready for your next vacation trip, read Five Safe Conduct Passes an article reprinted as a public service from Discovery Magazine. This is not a publication for those who have not yet passed their driving test, but rather for experienced drivers preparing for a lengthy trip. The booklet urges you to take your time. Your vacation days multiplied by two hundred should be the maximum distance to travel from home. This means you can plan on driving an average of 200 miles a day.

The second advice is to drive only when you feel well.

Thirdly, travel during the day because with diminishing daylight your alertness also diminishes.

Also, be courteous on the road because, as the folder points out, it is better to be slowed down than laid up.

Finally, always be on guard, because you never know how competent the other driver is.

Combine low-cost chicken and peaches for memorable meal

Baked Chicken With Peaches

By MARY MOORE

Be a really perceptive reader of the weekend food advertisements. When frying chickens are advertised at bargain prices buy one or two and make the most of your bargain.

We bought one this week and cut it up and made the peachy baked chicken below and it gave our dinner a real party atmosphere.

PEACHY BAKED CHICKEN

(serves 4)

- One 3-lb. frying chicken cut up.
- Two tbsp. prepared mustard.
- One 16-oz. can peaches (see below).
- One and one-half tsp. corn starch.
- One tsp. salt.
- Parsley (optional).

In a large shallow, greased baking dish arrange chicken pieces, skin side up. Bake them uncovered at 350 deg. Fahr. for 20 minutes.

Meanwhile combine in a small pot the prepared mustard, corn starch and salt and stir in $\frac{1}{2}$ cup of the peach syrup. (If you do not have $\frac{1}{2}$ cup make it up with water.) Cook stirring until slightly thickened. Remove from heat.

Reserve two choice peach halves and chop remaining peaches and add to syrup sauce, blending well.

After chicken has baked the first 20 minutes spoon half of the peach sauce over it and bake 20 minutes longer. Then spoon remaining sauce over all and bake 20 minutes longer till chicken is tender and golden. Transfer to preheated platter, spoon sauce remaining in pan over and garnish with reserved peach halves and sprigs of parsley if used.

WOMEN'S COUNCIL

Bigger Senate Role Urged

REGINA (CP) — More women in government-appointed positions, greater access to federal retraining programs and pepped-up research on conservation are among goals set by the National Council of Women of Canada.

About 100 delegates to the council's annual meeting here this week agreed that the prime minister should summon more women to the Senate as seats become available.

The resolution did not specify numbers but recommended that an effort to recruit women be made until "a more equitable membership is achieved" in the Senate.

The council also agreed that more women judges should be named in all tribunals under federal jurisdiction.

Because housewives wishing to work are ineligible for, or unaware of, federal retraining programs for adults, the council urged the federal government, with provincial co-operation, to expand advertisement of training programs.

It also asked that full-time household responsibility be made equivalent to participation in the labor force as eligibility for allowances.

URGES INCENTIVES

Council delegates said the National Housing Act should provide financial incentives for construction of advanced sewage treatment facilities. Loans for basic collector or sewage treatment plants, on the other hand, should be refused unless the effluent was of high quality.

The council will ask Ottawa to establish national water quality standards and press provincial governments for measures to prevent wasteful use of natural resources and "to develop alternate concepts of economic stability to bring man into harmony with his environment."

Earlier Monday, Helena Hnatyshyn, national council president, chided Canadian women for political timidity. They would not get House of Commons representation they deserved, she said, until they followed the trail blazed by other "deprived" groups in organizing resources and pooling skills.

Organizations such as the National Council of Women, Mrs. Hnatyshyn said, should commit themselves to direct political activity at all levels.

Tasks would include raising funds, setting up speakers' bureaus and helping women candidates resist intimidation by national political parties.

SEEK LOAN CHANGE

Other resolutions approved asked that:

—The federal government make student loans available to part-time students and that married people be permitted to apply for loans on the same basis as single persons—without endorsement by the spouse.

—Once the Criminal Code is amended to extend jury service equally to men and women, the government take steps to prohibit systematic exclusion of any groups from juries on the basis of sex, race, marital status or religion.

UNEMPLOYMENT NEW STATUS FOR SPACEMEN

By PAUL RECKER
HOUSTON (AP) — The chill wind of dying hopes and vanished dreams whistles through the ranks of the astronaut corps. One by one, like guests leaving a party after the laughter is gone, America's spacemen are seeking other jobs.

Of the 73 pilots and scientists selected as astronauts, 43 are left ready to fly. Twelve of this number are assigned to fly in either Apollo 17, the last moon mission, or Skylab, the series of three long-duration missions scheduled for next year.

Twenty astronauts have never flown and are not now selected for a planned mission. Their chances of flying after spending a half decade or more in training, says one astronaut, are between "poor and nonexistent."

Eleven others have flown at least once, but are not at present assigned to a mission.

Donald Slayton, chief of flight crew operations and one of the active astronauts who has never flown, knows his office is overstaffed and he is encouraging astronauts to seek other work.

Last week, two moon walkers, Edgar Mitchell of Apollo 14 and James Irwin of Apollo 15, announced their retirements effective later this summer.

Many of the spacemen, particularly those who never flew, are quietly making plans to leave.

The announcement last week of a joint rendezvous and docking mission with the Soviets pumped a particle of hope into the minds of some of the grounded spacemen. The mission, tentatively scheduled for 1973, will need two or three—it's undecided as yet—American astronauts.

Slayton said the crew for that mission probably will be selected early in 1974 and likely will come from the veterans of the Apollo and Skylab programs.

Some of the spacemen who know they have no chance for the Russian flight are pulling for Slayton, the hard-luck guy of the astronaut corps, to get one of the jobs.

Slayton, one of the original seven American astronauts, is the only one who has never flown. A heart murmur that kept him on the ground has gone away and he was restored to flight status early this year.

Outside job offers for the astronauts, which came in cascades during the champagne hours of America's space party, have dwindled.

B.C. 'Unwilling' to Raise Its Pollution Standards

RICHMOND (CP) — An executive member of the British Columbia Environment Council says the B.C. Government is unwilling to raise its pollution standards and so does not qualify for interest-free federal money to establish adequate sewage treatment on the Fraser River. Dorothy Beach said B.C. doesn't meet standards set by the International Joint Commission, a qualification for the loan.

Barge Run Ends

KELOWNA (CP) — Barge service on Okanagan Lake was scheduled to end today after 76 years of operation. Canadian Pacific, which started the service in 1896 with purchase of The Columbia and Kootenay Steam Navigation Co., said 10 crew members and seven relief workers will be given other positions and centres previously served by barge will get truck service.

Beautification

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council in Vancouver Tuesday approved a $125,000 beautification program by Blood Alley Square and Tronche Alley in the refurbished Gastown district. Property owners are to pay two-thirds of the cost through local improvement taxes. Plans for the work, expected to start next year, include cobblestone paving, landscaping and underground wiring.

Continue Program

COQUITLAM (CP) — The Coquitlam School Board decided Tuesday night to ask the provincial government to continue a program under which French language instruction is available in kindergarten and grades one, two and three. The board also approved continuation of conversational French classes in grades five to seven.

Fisherman Missing

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Vancouver fisherman Kioshi Yada was missing and presumed drowned north of here after his 35-foot gillnetter Ocean Breeze was found drifting this week. It is believed that Yada, about 60, may have fallen into the sea as he leaned over the side to remove the log caught in the boat's net. A search continues today.

Re-Elected

VANCOUVER (CP) — E. G. Shorter, a former vice-president of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., has been re-elected president of the British Columbia Safety Council.

Fight Fire

ALEXIS CREEK (CP) — Thirty-five firefighters and a forest service Canso water bomber were still at work Tuesday on a 550-acre fire that started Monday 15 miles south of here. A 40-acre fire near the Williams Lake golf course was being mopped up Tuesday after being brought under control Monday. The Cariboo district fire hazard is rated high to extreme.

Man Hunted

VALEMOUNT (CP) — RCMP used tracking dogs and aircraft to scour bushland near here today for a man who shot and wounded another man following an argument Monday. The wounded man, Alphonse Brasser, is in good condition in hospital in Prince George. The name of the hunted man has not been released.

Proposal Approved

DELTA (CP) — Municipal council here has approved submission to the Greater Vancouver Regional District of the controversial $80 million quadrant development proposal for 616 acres at Tsawwassen. The development, which would include some 35 hundred housing units, would take about 10 years to complete.

No-Strike Clause

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The school board here wants to write a no-strike, no-lockout provision into all new school construction contracts awarded in future and is consulting with lawyers. Trustees warned that up to 25 per cent of the district's students may be placed on a shift system this fall because of the current construction lockout.

Overpass Tenders

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Tenders will be called soon for a $1,082,000 railway overpass here to eliminate what Mayor Muri Evers called "the most dangerous railway crossing in Canada today." He said construction will begin when the civic strike ends. The intersection is at Front and Columbia streets in the downtown area.

BOMB SHELTER BLAST KILLS FIVE CHILDREN

VALDESE, N.C. (AP) — An explosion ripped through a bomb shelter dug into the hillside at the home of a textile executive, killing five children.

Fire Chief A. O. Anderson said the children apparently were playing on the hillside right above the bomb shelter at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Garrou at the time of the explosion Tuesday.

Anderson said one child's body was found in a street at the bottom of the hill. The other bodies fell into the pit left when the blast blew off the roof of the shelter. One child escaped with minor injury.

Police first blamed the explosion on a butane gas tank in the shelter.

Commission Ups Civic Offer by 1%

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Mediation Commission recommended Tuesday that striking civic workers in the Greater Vancouver area be granted a two-year contract giving them an 8% per cent wage increase retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year, with another 6% per cent increase on the new rates on Jan. 1, 1973.

Mediation Commissioner Pen Baskin said the first-year rates are in effect one per cent higher than those offered by the Municipal Labor Relations Bureau, which bargains for seven municipalities in the Vancouver area.

The unions had asked a 10-per-cent increase retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year, a further four per cent on July 1, and fringe benefits which the MLRB said would take the total package to about 16 per cent.

Some 3,800 civic workers are on strike in Vancouver, Burnaby, New Westminster, Richmond and Delta. North Vancouver city and district are the only two municipalities not yet hit by strikes.

The MLRP took its case before the mediation commission last week after wage talks broke down with the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Also on Tuesday, striking civic workers forced Mayor Tom Campbell to leave his limousine and walk through a picket line on his arrival at city hall.

Alberta May Curb U.S. Land Buying

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government intends to introduce legislation prohibiting the sale of Crown land to non-Canadians, Alan Warrack, minister of lands and forests, said Tuesday night.

Dr. Warrack said in an interview outside the legislature he would introduce the bill as soon as it is printed. It would give Albertans priority in land sales and it fulfills a promise made by premier Peter Lougheed during the campaign leading up to the provincial election last Aug. 30.

At the same time, Dr. Warrack said, he wants the legislature's committee on foreign ownership to examine the entire issue of Alberta land owned by foreigners, primarily United States citizens.

He said he knew nothing of a report allegedly prepared for the former Social Credit administration by an Edmonton consultant. The report, prepared in 1971, showed that at least 48 square miles of Alberta were bought by U.S. residents in 1970.

Social Credit Leader Harry Strom, premier until his party was upset by the Progressive Conservatives in the election, said he had never ordered a report "as such."

"I called for a cursory examination," he said, adding that the information he received did not indicate any major problem.

The Saskatchewan government has introduced similar legislation restricting land sales but it has been stalled pending committee study.

hilda beastallFine Time of Year
For Cacti, Succulents

By HILDA BEASTALL

Cacti and succulents are in a good growing period now, many developing flower buds and not a dull looking plant among them.

It is the one period when the pot plant enthusiast may water these specialized treasures almost with abandon, the one restriction being to allow at least the topsoil to become dry between waterings.

With approximately the correct soil mixture for each type of plant, the soil will not remain saturated for long because new growth and production of flower buds causes plenty of root activity.

In a collection of plants in a greenhouse or other structure where splashed water is no problem, cacti really benefit during early summer from a light spraying with the hose.

As with most other watering, this should be done in the mornings and not more than twice in a week unless temperatures rise into the 90's inside the structure. A cactus with a crown depression should be checked a few hours later to be sure no moisture is left in the depression. Tissues in this depressed area are soft, since this is where flower buds and expansion growth takes place.

* * *

Succulents in five or six-inch pots such as large Chinese jade (Crassula argentea), Columnneas, and Echevarias should have the pots filled with water slowly about twice weekly now and a light spray over the foliage at the same time.

This removes dust accumulation, enabling leaves to perform their normal functions.

A Christmas-blooming cactus, Schlumbergera Bridgesii, had doubled its size of top growth since April. It has been in the same four-inch pot for three years.

With the house temperature up to 80 deg. F. lately and wind tearing through most of the time, this plant needs the pot filled with water every third day. It likes warmth and moisture just now.

Its rest period comes later by tapering off during August until water is practically withheld from September 15 to October 15.

Neither this cactus nor the similar ones blooming at Easter need direct sunlight. They do better shaded by other plants or in a position at the side of a window. All these cacti grow in crochets of jungle trees where the soil is composed of leaf debris fertilized with bird guano. The light is dim, humidity high and rainfall heavy during the growing period, followed by a dry spell before flowering.

If we approximate these conditions with porous, leafy soil, tepid watering over the whole plant occasionally and a couple of weak alginate feedings in summer followed by the rest period, flowers should result during our winter months, or at Easter according to the kind of plants we are growing.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Back in the 1940s and early 1950s, one of the nation's better bridge players was the late Fred Snite, Jr., of Miami Beach, Fla. Snite, who died in 1955, was a victim of polio-myelitis, and spent the last 15 years of his life in an iron lung. Despite the physical handicap of his iron lung, he was a regular competitor in the national tournaments conducted by the American Contract Bridge League. Here is one of the deals that he played during a tournament.

East-West vulnerable. North deals.

A K J 7 3
J 10 8 4

WEST
7 5 4

SOUTH

Q 10
A K Q 9 5 3
10 7

The bidding:
North: East: South: West:
1♥ 2♠ 2♦ 3♠
3♦ Pass 5♦ Pass
Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

As Snite examined his hand prior to making the opening lead against South's five-diamond contract, he knew that he was going to be on lead for the first and last time. With East having overcalled at the two-level, he had to have at least five clubs—and, therefore, if West led a low club originally, he could never win a second lead of this suit with his king, since either dummy or declarer would have, at most, a singleton club.

And so, at trick one, Snite made the "abnormal" lead of the king of clubs, to look at the dummy, as it were. When the king won the trick, Seven promptly shifted to the seven of spades. East was now enabled to cash two spade tricks, thus inflicting a one-trick set on South.

Had Snite chosen to make the normal, orthodox lead of his fourth-highest club, South would have had smooth sailing en route to the fulfillment of his contract. In this case, East would have won the first club trick with his ace.

From here in, the defender's cause would be lost, for the most they could now cash would be East's ace of spades (declarer, after drawing trumps, would be able to get rid of his other losers on dummy's hearts). But Snite's imaginative lead of the club king enabled the defenders to defeat declarer before the latter ever won a trick.

If this deal demonstrates any one thing, it is that there are no hard-and-fast principles regarding the matter of the opening lead. Normally, when partner bids a suit, his partner leads the fourth-from-the-highest in that suit. But with every principle there are exceptions—and on this deal the exception became the order of the day.

60 Poisoned
At Barbecue

NANAIMO (CP) — An outbreak of food poisoning here a week ago has been traced by the Central Vancouver Island Health Unit to food served at a fish and game club barbecue.

Dr. P. J. Reynolds, health unit director, said Monday that 60 persons attending the barbecue May 22 developed food poisoning.

"Obviously the total number involved is much greater," he said.

Dr. Reynolds said food samples from the barbecue and specimens from patients treated in hospital here both contained an organism known to cause food poisoning.

WHY COMMUNES FALL FLAT

MONTREAL (CP) — Life is not all that rosy down in the communes for those who have fled the city for more freedom and meaning in their lives, a Canadian sociologist said Tuesday.

Prof. R. N. Whitehurst of the University of Windsor told a meeting of the Canadian Sociology and Anthropological Society there is not much doubt about the trend away from the rat-race existence of cities, particularly among the under-25 age group.

But communes are encountering problems ranging from an aloofness or resentment by persons who have lived in the area all their lives to a rather idealistic approach to the type of skills needed to exist on a farm or in a rural area, he said.

Many communes break up because of a lack of planning, he told the meeting, held in conjunction with the 12-day annual Learned Societies of Canada convention at McGill University.

"Good planning and an economic base of reasonable proportions are not guarantees of success in a rural venture, but are necessary for minimal survival."

In a paper presented to the society, Prof. Whitehurst said that the trend away from cities is not likely to stop. The government and communities involved should begin to get at the causes of the movement and explore steps to recognize and direct it.

Scholars Query Their Own Worth

... no pedant

MONTREAL (CP) — What's the use of political science?

The blunt question came from an insider, Michel Oliver, vice-principal of McGill University, at the opening of his address at the conference of Learned Societies Tuesday.

It was typical of how some of the nearly 6,000 persons attending meetings of 44 societies during a two-week period are trying to depart academic aloofness and grapple with questions that might be asked by laymen.

The keen blue eyes of poetess Dorothy Livesay, who came from Victoria, twinkled when she confided in an interview there even is a tendency to shu such words as scholar and scholarly as pedantic, tending to raise bothersome barriers.

In an address to the Association of Canadian University

Teachers of English, Miss Livesay, 42, said she could not remember in any way being taught to write poetry or anything else.

"I did listen to criticism from my parents insofar as they taught me a respect for language and the journalist's keenness for piling down: 'Stick to nouns and verbs was my father's admonition. ..."

ANSWERS OWN QUESTION

Mr. Oliver, addressing the Canadian Society for Study of Higher Education, answered his own questions about the uses of political science and what can reasonably be expected from a political science department in a Canadian university.

"Political science should have something to say about political values and political behavior; about the operation of political institutions and about political process; about local, national and international affairs. ...

The public surely has a right to expect that somewhere within a department there can be found a smattering of knowledge about constitutional law, parliamentary procedure and the operations of the United Nations, even if current fashion within the discipline favors the study of Marxist historiography or comparative modes of political socialization.

"Now that I have broached the subject of naive public claims on political science, I had better touch on the widespread notion that political science departments should know something about Canadian government and politics."

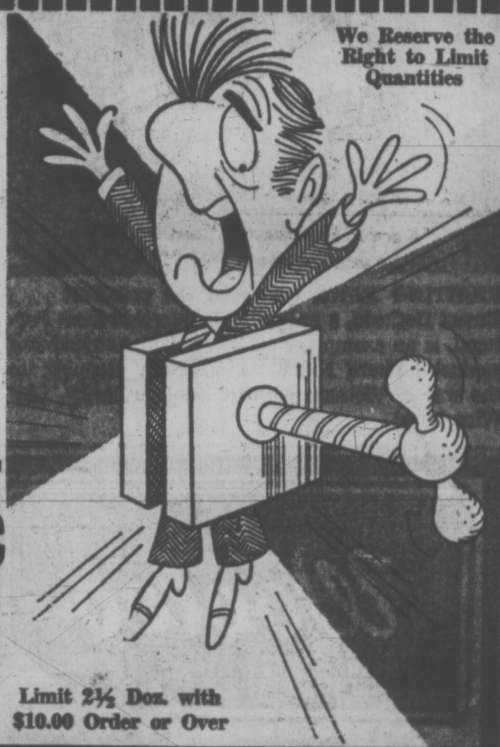

"I have more sympathy for this point of view when it is expressed by students or their parents, who are usually reasonable in their demands, than when it comes from crusading nationalists within the profession, with an eye on the number of Americans who are seen as cluttering the Canadian academic job market."

Mr. Oliver's standoff view may have been prompted by his 10-year absence from the centre of the political science discipline, first as research director of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism and later as administrator of McGill, host to the Learned Societies, now in their third day of meetings. He is scheduled soon to take up his new appointment as president of Ottawa's Carleton University.

SHOULD TOUCH ALL BASES

Mr. Oliver said political science should "at its boundaries touch history, law and philosophy, sociology, economics, anthropology and psychology. ..."

DaCosta vs. the President: A New Twist

FIGHTING YANK who sued the president... Ernest DeCosta, a naturalized American from Portugal, is an exemplary soldier, but he has laid suit against Richard Nixon, for allegedly stepping up the war in Vietnam without legal authority. (AP Wirephoto)

SAIGON (AP) — Immigrant, hardhat and now a machine-gunner in the United States Army, Ernest deCosta is so opposed to the Vietnamese war that he sued President Nixon.

Yet he is an efficient fighter, a volunteer in an elite reconnaissance platoon stalking through the dangerous bush in War Zone D.

In camouflaged fatigues and a cork-blackened face, the 22-year-old soldier from New York City packs 140 pounds of machine-gun, ammunition, food and water on weary patrols northeast of Saigon. He has risked his life with increasing frequency since Hanoi went on the offensive.

DaCosta's superior officers are frankly puzzled how a soldier can be so unwilling and fight so well.

DaCosta's answer is simple: Opposition to the war coupled with a strong sense of duty to the country fighting it.

"I don't believe in this war," he explained. "But I'm here because I have to be; I was ordered to come. I've got a good life in the United States and I want to go back to it holding my head high."

DaCosta left his native Portugal in 1965 with a U.S. student's visa, a desire to learn English and "see America."

WORKED AS HARDHAT

Upon graduation from high school, he received resident alien status and got a job as a hardhat with a demolition company. Then he was drafted.

Patriotism Overshadows Convictions

"I didn't mind serving my time — although I figure two years in the army is costing me $55,000 — but I didn't want to go to Vietnam," he says. "I was still a Portuguese citizen, I felt the war had nothing to do with me."

DaCosta took his case to the American Civil Liberties Union, which fought it all the way to the court of appeals but failed to prevent his shipment to Vietnam in November, 1971. The appeals court rejected his petition for release from Vietnam duty and the case now is awaiting a Supreme Court ruling.

TRIED NEW PLOY

Meanwhile, daCosta has become a U.S. citizen. He used a 14-day leave last February to fly to Hawaii and take the oath of allegiance.

He still wanted to get out of Vietnam but he felt the Supreme Court would not act in time to affect his tour in the war zone. Apparently of the same opinion, his lawyers tried a new legal ploy — daCosta versus the president of the United States.

The Civil Liberties Union filed a suit May 12 on behalf of daCosta, charging that Nixon had stepped up the war without congressional approval by ordering increased bombing and a naval blockade of North Vietnam.

District Court Judge John F. Dooling ruled against daCosta, May 24, saying the president's action was "within the boundaries of the continuing war and not forbidden by law." But he added that Washington's handling of the Indochina war demonstrated a flaw in government that may call for prompt "fundamental constitutional changes."

DaCosta said he "never expected to win against the president," but he stoutly maintained the case was not a publicity stunt.

"My lawyers were just doing what I believed in," he said.

Breath Tests 'No Help'

MONTREAL (CP) — The executive director of the Canada Safety Council said today there is no evidence that Canada's .08 blood-alcohol test has reduced accidents caused by impaired driving.

P. J. Farmer told a joint session of the council and the Traffic Injury Research Foundation of Canada that "unfortunately the evidence to date does not indicate that incidences of driving while intoxicated have been significantly reduced nor has there been an appreciable reduction in accidents caused by impaired driving."

Mr. Farmer said tougher legislation is needed to curb drinking drivers, including the introduction of roadside screening tests to be administered on suspicion of drinking, following a traffic violation, or after being involved in an accident.

Canada's impaired driving law requires a driver to undergo a breath test on demand, with fines of up to $1,000 for refusing the test, or for having more than .08 parts of alcohol per parts of blood.

STUDY MADE IN BRITAIN

Another speaker also suggested that in Britain, where initial results of breath-test legislation showed sharp declines in accidents, the effectiveness of the legislation may have been short-lived.

J. D. J. Harvard, of The British Medical Association in London, said a study taken in the years following introduction of the legislation in 1967 showed the proportion of drivers having alcohol concentrations above .08 per cent has increased by five per cent since then.

In the year the legislation was introduced, fatal and serious casualties fell between nine and 44 per cent depending on the time of day.

Slick Operator on Great Lakes

BLACK PATCH TELLS

TORONTO (CP) — Ever wonder how the federal government catches ships in the act of polluting the Great Lakes?

The man chiefly responsible for tracking down such culprits is Desmond O'Halloran, a 42-year-old pilot who flies up to 1,000 miles a day for the federal government in search of polluters.

Mr. O'Halloran, who works for the Canadian Coast Guard, recently has been flying his twin-engine Cessna 337 out of Toronto Island Airport to cover Lake Ontario, Lake Erie and the Welland Canal.

"If you see a patch of oil and it's not been there long, all you've got to do is follow the ship's wake and you've got him," Mr. O'Halloran explained in an interview.

If he spots a ship spilling oil, Mr. O'Halloran takes a photograph and radios for a Coast Guard cutter to take a sample of the spill.

A federal pollution prevention officer then is sent to meet the offending ship at its next port of call.

The air surveillance seems to be paying off. Mr. O'Halloran said that in the four years he's been making such flights, he's seen a "quite noticeable" improvement in the quality of the Great Lakes waters.

Last year, 44 court convictions for spilling oil were registered against ships plying Canadian coastal and Great Lakes shipping lanes. Almost $80,000 was collected in fines.

Brazil Hijacker Outwitted

SAO PAULO, Brazil (Reuters) — A hijacker killed himself here after losing a battle of wits in an attempt to hold for ransom a Brazilian airliner with 96 persons on board.

He duped city airport officials into believing he had two accomplices—one of them a woman—and that they were ready to blow up the plane and its occupants if his demands were not met.

After the bizarre and confused incidents, he himself was outsmarted Tuesday night and shot himself through the head.

An air-ministry communiqué early today said the Lockheed Electra turboprop of Varig Airlines, on a regular flight to Curitiba and Porto Alegre in south Brazil, was hijacked near Curitiba Tuesday and the pilot forced to return to Congonhas airport here.

Then followed more than seven hours of haggling between the hijacker, using the plane's radio, and airport security men in the control tower.

Brazilian authorities agreed to hand over the ransom of 1,500,000 cruzeiros (about $260,000) and three parachutes.

The hijacker, named as Nelson Mesquita, 25, said he and his fictitious accomplices intended to bail out somewhere over Brazilian territory.

Late Tuesday night, 88 of the 99 passengers were allowed to leave the aircraft, along with five of the seven crew members.

Pilot Celso Caldeira, the flight mechanic and an air force major among the passengers remained on board the plane.

An air force spokesman said two of the plane's four engines were sabotaged from the outside by men pretending to refuel it for a takeoff.

After the passengers had left the plane, the hijacker was told it would not be taking off because of engine trouble.

He was subsequently overpowered by the three remaining hostages who locked him in the lavatory. Then they jumped to safety out of one of the cabin windows because of the hijacker's threat to blow up the aircraft with high explosives.

Troops who had surrounded the plane began piping tear gas into it through the air conditioning system.

A spokesman for the Varig later said Mesquita, seeing all was lost, put a bullet through his head.

FEWER U.S. DOLLARS COMING OUR WAY

OTTAWA (CP) — Travel expenditures in Canada by United States residents declined 12.5 per cent in the first three months of 1972 from a year earlier, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

American spending in this country declined to $91 million from $104 million in January, February and March, 1971.

Canadian spending in the U.S. rose to $220 million from $218 million, increasing the travel deficit for Canada to $129 million from $114 million.

13 GRITS REVOLT ON TAKE OVERS

TOTAWA (UPI) — Thirteen Government MPs served notice to the cabinet today that they expect stronger federal action to be taken to regulate foreign investment in Canada.

While the backbenchers said they supported the government's bill which would have the industry department screen foreign takeovers of Canadian businesses and industries, they also said that "the need for defining a more extensive policy on foreign ownership is urgent."

"... We look forward to its elaboration as part of the industrial strategy promised by the government," they said in a statement.

The MPs who signed the letter to the Committee for an Independent Canada, were:

Warren Allmand, Judd Buchanan, Eymard Corbin, Pierre Deane, Tom Goode, Joe Guay, Mark MacGuigan, Murray McBride, Steve Otto, Keith Penner, John Roberts, Ian Wahn and David Weatherhead.

Wahn is chairman of the Commons External Affairs committee which a year and a half ago produced tough recommendations on regulation of foreign ownership, including a requirement that Canadian-based companies be required to be at least 51 per cent controlled by Canadians. The government's bill was widely criticized when it was introduced early this month on the grounds that it did not go far enough to deal with the high percentage of foreign control of the highest in the industrialized world.

The bill does not deal with new foreign investment or expansion of existing foreign investment, but only with takeovers of Canadian firms which are estimated to account for about 10 per cent of foreign investment coming into Canada annually.

The MPs' letter replied to telegrams sent to all members by the Committee for an Independent Canada — a broadly-based moderate nationalist group — which asked that all MPs take part in debate on the bill because it was "essential to Canada's future that private members of all parties show the inadequacy and weakness of the government's bill."

New Labor HQ

CALGARY (CP) — Organized labor in the city is planning to improve its image with a $12 million office and convention centre to serve as unions' headquarters.

R. T. Flack, president of Calgary Labor Temple Co. Ltd., said Monday the building has been planned for several years.

PORT HARDY — There are plenty of jobs available in this thriving community on the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

The number one employer here is the Island Copper mine run by Utah International Inc.

There are 550 employees in the combined mine-mill operation in a town where the population has risen to 2,000 and seems likely to hit 3,000 within another two years.

"Jobs? sure there are jobs here," says Morton Pratt, mine manager of Island Copper.

"If a man came in here today and was willing to work I'd probably hire him."

"If ten men came in, I'd probably hire them."

"Twenty? Yes, I might even hire twenty."

Utah is hoping to attract married men mainly, people who will buy homes in the company's new subdivision in town (with a guarantee of a company buy-back).

The main problems are the isolation, a serious shortage of living quarters and prices that are generally higher than in Victoria.

There is some accommodation available in mobile homes on the mine property but most employees commute the 10 miles along a fairly smooth gravel road between the mine and the town.

"I picked up a hitch-hiker a few days ago," Pratt noted. "I hired him. I picked up another, asked him a few questions... and hired him, too."

"I need men up here. One thing, though, I'm looking for permanent employees, not summer help."

Another major employer is MacMillan-Bloedel which has some 180 men working in logging operations. And jobs are expanding rapidly in town.

Property values have soared. A lot in town that could have been picked up for $300 in 1965 is on the market today with an asking price of $10,000.

Building lots along the highway between the town and the new big airport (as big as Victoria's) are selling for $3,500 today. These are small lots of bush and trees. Cleared lots run higher.

Closer in to Port Hardy, lots cleared are selling for $5,000 each. New houses on lots are going for about $25,000.

The only road out of Port Hardy is a logging route down to Gold River — and it's a much-travelled stretch. Residents say they can make Campbell River in six hours. But they are looking forward to the opening of the new highway which is expected in five years — and will bring a further boom in jobs here, mainly in the service fields.

Shift Starts Early

Some 200 loggers in the Renfrew division of B.C. Forest Products Ltd. started early shift today as the woods dried out and the fire hazard mounted in early summer heat.

Crews began work at 5 a.m. and were to be out of the woods at 2 p.m. until further notice.

One side of the division's logging operations was to close tonight due to a shortage of felled and bucked timber as a result of a faller's strike, but only about six men are affected in that sector.

Manager Ken Holberg said remaining operations in the division could run until the

OPEN DAILY 9 TO 9 — SATURDAYS 9 TO 3

Tomorrow the high cost of drinking & driving goes even higher.

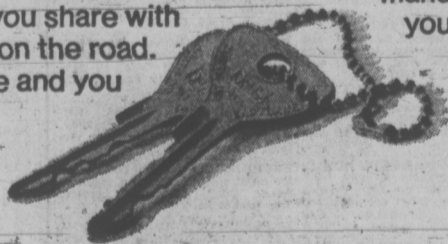

From tomorrow on, if you're convicted of impaired driving you automatically lose your licence for a full month.

If it's your second offence, make that a minimum six month suspension.

There are no exceptions. Even if driving is your living.

A driver's licence is not a right. It's a privilege you earn, and driving is a responsibility you share with every other driver on the road.

Abuse the privilege and you lose your licence. It's that simple.

Last year 13,300 B.C. drivers were arrested for impaired driving. 315 people died in traffic accidents traced to impaired driving.

So now — add to the heavy fine, the possible night in jail, the criminal record, the 10 penalty points, the higher insurance rates, the embarrassing publicity, the cost of a lawyer — add the new mandatory suspension of your licence.

If that sounds like a high price to pay, so it should.

If you drink, don't drive.

FLOOD CREST NEARS AT KEREMEOS

Times News Service

KEREMEOS — The Similkameen River continues to rise today as dog-tired volunteer workers wonder if 24 hours of labor on straining dikes will keep the rampaging waters from this community and the neighboring villages of Princeton, Cawston and Hedley.

A rise of between eight and 12 inches in the water level is expected today as 90-degree temperatures bring newly-melted water spilling off the mountains.

The many tributaries of the Similkameen and the Tula-meen, which joins with it at Princeton are also in flood.

A number of residents on the outskirts of Hedley were evacuated late Tuesday when a swollen creek threatened their homes.

About 30 residents of the Cawston area and about 17 Keremeos homes were also evacuated.

At Princeton, where more than 500 volunteers worked on the dikes Tuesday, Mayor Dave Brown said the river level had dropped and "we're in the best position now that we've been in for the past 36 hours."

There has been heavy damage along the 60-mile stretch of the Similkameen between Princeton and Cawston. In many areas, the usual 100 to 200-foot-wide river channel is up to half a mile wide.

The biggest threat is at Keremeos. Dikes at the west end of the village seeped badly Tuesday and developed holes through which the water rushed.

Mayor Stan Pollard said if the dike breaks the entire business section of this village of 800 persons will be flooded.

"Everyone is dog-tired," he said, "and we can't take much more."

Many of the Keremeos dike workers, about half of them high school students, got as little as one hour sleep Tuesday.

Mayor Pollard said he wants a state of emergency

Irish Guerrillas Step Up Violence

BELFAST (CP) — Irish guerrillas, smashing aside a growing peace movement, left a trail of bomb destruction across Northern Ireland today. Five more deaths, including two British soldiers, were reported.

The violence escalated a few hours after the Official wing of the Irish Republican Army Monday night renounced force of arms as a weapon to bring Ulster under the rule of the neighboring Republic of Ireland.

The bloodshed was clearly an assertion of power by the provisional arm of the IRA, which has pledged its fight will go on.

Some members of the Official IRA were reported switching to the Provisionals following their side's ceasefire.

About 40 young men were said to have made the move in Londonderry.

An unnamed senior British Army officer was quoted by the London Daily Express as saying: "They are hardened gunmen who went into it for a fight. They are not going to give up now."

TOLL NOW 332

The bombings and shootings which ravaged Ulster Tuesday carried the three-year death toll to 332. This year alone, 146 are known to have been killed.

Two soldiers died in hospital early today, one of injuries received when a fortified security post was blown up in Belfast, wounding four other soldiers and two civilians, none seriously.

The second soldier died after gunmen in a passing car shot him in the back as he was in patrol in an armored car in the Andersonstown road in Belfast.

The explosion in the heavily sandbagged army and police post in Springfield Road in western Belfast was caused by a bomb which was apparently smuggled inside the building.

NO INSURANCE HIKE FOR SOME

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

New insurance rates for some Greater Victoria drivers will not increase over last year's, but others will rise as high as 19 per cent.

Young drivers will experience the highest rate increases when they come into effect July 1, according to industry spokesmen.

It is also becoming clear that where no increases are apparent, the $7 reduction in no-fault coverage compulsory in British Columbia, will be wiped out by rises in other parts of a driver's insurance.

The rates are the first to be fully scrutinized by the B.C. automobile insurance board, a government body.

J. H. Glavin, chairman of the independent insurance conference, which includes about a quarter of the insurance companies in the province, released that groups' rates Tuesday.

Other rates as yet unreleased or still under scrutiny by the insurance board are expected to be in the same range as

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

The provincial government has approved plans for a large housing subdivision adjacent to Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach, despite opposition from the Alberni-Clayoquot Regional District.

One of the principal owners of the property at Chesterman's Beach is H. R. McDermid, Social Credit member for the riding.

The regional board recommended against the subdivision because directors feared sewage from septic tanks would contaminate the well water of nearby property owners, Mayor Bill Russell of Ucluelet said.

The subdivision is on low level land, and the water table in places is only a few inches below the surface, he said.

"To our amazement, the highways department and the health department approved the subdivision."

He criticized the government for failing to approve a regional board zoning plan to govern the development of unorganized territory near to the park.

The plan calls for incorporating unorganized territory between the park and the villages of Tofino and Ucluelet on the west and east wings of the Long Beach area, into the two municipalities.

The two 3½ miles strips of land are still under the jurisdiction of the government.

TEL AVIV — An anonymous telephone call warned Israeli authorities today that explosives had been placed aboard an incoming jet liner, and Lod airport went on a special bomb alert less than 24 hours after Japanese gunmen hired by Arab guerrillas staged a bloody massacre there.

A caller told airport police that the explosives were aboard a TWA plane "arriving now." Two TWA planes were due at that moment—a Boeing 707 with 72 persons from Rome and a Boeing 747 jumbo with 118 persons from Frankfurt.

Both aircraft were isolated in a far corner of the airport complex and passengers evacuated.

The 707 was allowed to continue to Bombay after a search found no bombs. The passengers on the 747 were taken a safe distance from the aircraft to identify their luggage and have it searched.

Prime Minister Golda Meir hinted today at Israeli retribution against the Arab states who she says sent the neatly-dressed Japanese suicide squad to Lod Airport where they massacred men, women and children Tuesday night. She called it murder by messenger.

Another Israeli official termed the carnage "a massacre of the innocents."

The 74-year-old leader, her voice trembling with anger, also censured world governments for lax airport security and said the massacre could "easily have been prevented."

France, on whose national airline the gunmen arrived, condemned the terror attack. But the Paris government shot back a sharp retort to Mrs. Meir's comments on security.

"The French government can only express its surprise at certain official Israeli statements," government spokesman Jean Philippe

By DOUG MACRAE
Times Staff

A Chinatown fish store owner was shot to death this morning in what police believe was a robbery attempt.

Frank S. Hong, 44, of Apt. 432-1830 Fern, was found in a pool of blood shortly after 8 a.m. this morning.

Hong operated Rainbow Fish Co., at 560 Fisgard in the heart of the city's tiny Chinese district.

A post mortem was being conducted late this morning. Preliminary reports said Hong died of massive brain injuries as the result of one or more bullet wounds in the head.

Victoria Fire department aided police in early investigation, operating a ladder truck as officers clambered over the three-storey, stone and stucco building which housed the fish market.

A police spokesman theorized that Hong was shot after he resisted an opening-time stick-up attempt.

GOLD HITS $60

LONDON (UPI) — The price of gold briefly touched $50 an ounce on the Swiss free market today in busy early trading and momentarily hit $59.75 an ounce in London. In Paris, it soared to $59.07, a new peak for France.

Later in the session, prices eased again.

Swiss dealers called today's market activity "completely crazy" and some predicted a heavy turnover for the session.

Dealers said the big price leap followed reported remarks by U.S. under secretary of the treasury Paul Volcker, taken out of context.

After a Geneva conference he reportedly told questioners another dollar devaluation could not be ruled out.

The basic reason for the recent price leap is the growing gap between gold production and its use by industry.

The two 3½ miles strips of land are still under the jurisdiction of the government.

Chesherman's beach is near Tofino and some people wanted it included in the national park when it was established two years ago.

If the government approved the zoning plan for the area, the subdivision would have to conform to the bylaws like all others in the villages of Tofino and Ucluelet, Russell said.

He warned that shoddily built communities and disorganized development "of the worst kind" threaten the approaches to the park due to the inaction of the government.

"The government has been leasing land in the organized area contrary to the advice of the regional district," he said.

"At present there is nothing to prevent the establishment of junkyards and other developments not in keeping with the area along the highway to the park," he said. "We can only hold up development for 90 days."

Tofino and Ucluelet will eventually inherit the problems of the uncontrolled areas, he said.

Chabot Ultimatum To Labor, Bosses

PRINCE GEORGE (CP-Staff) — Labor Minister James Chabot today told the British Columbia construction industry and its 18 building trades unions to get moving on settlement of contract differences by June 7 or face government-ordered binding arbitration.

Chabot delivered his ultimatum in a telegram from this central B.C. city to the Construction Labor Relations Association which bargains for 840 contractors and the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, representing 30,000 building tradesmen locked out since April 28.

The minister gave both sides until next Wednesday to sign collective agreements, or accept appointment of a three-man arbitration board that "would resolve their differences."

"Unless they indicate to me by noon, June 7 that they are prepared to sign a collective agreement or accept my proposal, I will have no alternative but to refer the dispute to mediation for binding settlement," Chabot said later.

Chabot said his arbitration board proposal would allow the unions and the association to pick their own chairman. If they were unable to do this, one would be chosen for them.

The alternative to the board or ratification of a new collective agreement, said Chabot, is referral of the dispute to the controversial B.C. Mediation Commission which is empowered by the government to order the terms of a contract settlement.

The dispute, he added, is "having a very serious effect on the construction industry" and there is the possibility of a fall shortage of school and hospital space if it is allowed to continue.

The CLRA claims its lockout has halted work on about $500 million worth of construction. The association invoked the lockout after a wave of selective strikes by the building trades against individual contractors.

The unions held 44 separate collective agreements with the CLRA, all of which expired March 31. Union negotiators have demanded wage increases ranging between 16.8 and 34.4

TEL AVIV — An anonymous telephone call warned Israeli authorities today that explosives had been placed aboard an incoming jet liner, and Lod airport went on a special bomb alert less than 24 hours after Japanese gunmen hired by Arab guerrillas staged a bloody massacre there.

A caller told airport police that the explosives were aboard a TWA plane "arriving now." Two TWA planes were due at that moment—a Boeing 707 with 72 persons from Rome and a Boeing 747 jumbo with 118 persons from Frankfurt.

Both aircraft were isolated in a far corner of the airport complex and passengers evacuated.

The 707 was allowed to continue to Bombay after a search found no bombs. The passengers on the 747 were taken a safe distance from the aircraft to identify their luggage and have it searched.

Prime Minister Golda Meir hinted today at Israeli retribution against the Arab states who she says sent the neatly-dressed Japanese suicide squad to Lod Airport where they massacred men, women and children Tuesday night. She called it murder by messenger.

Another Israeli official termed the carnage "a massacre of the innocents."

The 74-year-old leader, her voice trembling with anger, also censured world governments for lax airport security and said the massacre could "easily have been prevented."

France, on whose national airline the gunmen arrived, condemned the terror attack. But the Paris government shot back a sharp retort to Mrs. Meir's comments on security.

"The French government can only express its surprise at certain official Israeli statements," government spokesman Jean Philippe

Store Owner Shot to Death

A Chinatown fish store owner was shot to death this morning in what police believe was a robbery attempt.

Frank S. Hong, 44, of Apt. 432-1830 Fern, was found in a pool of blood shortly after 3 this morning.

Hong operated Rainbow Fish Co., at 560 Fisgard in the heart of the city's tiny Chinese district.

A post mortem was being conducted late this morning. Preliminary reports said Hong died of massive brain injuries as the result of one or more bullet wounds in the head.

Victoria fire department aided police in early investigation, operating a ladder, truck as officers clambered over the three-storey, stone and stucco building which housed the fish market.

A police spokesman theorized that Hong was shot after he resisted an opening-time stick-up attempt.

GOLD HITS $60

LONDON (UPI) — The price of gold briefly touched $60 an ounce on the Swiss free market today in busy early trading and momentarily hit $59.75 an ounce in London. In Paris, it soared to $59.07, a new peak for France.

Later in the session, prices eased again.

Swiss dealers called today's market activity "completely crazy" and some predicted a heavy turnover for the session.

Dealers said the big price leap followed reported remarks by U.S. under secretary of the treasury Paul Volcker, taken out of context.

After a Geneva conference he reportedly told questioners another dollar devaluation could not be ruled out.

The basic reason for the recent price leap is the growing gap between gold production and its use by industry.

Moral: If You Own It It Will Soon Own You

Our notes today concern the profound perils of materialistic domesticity that await every man who takes a bride, but don't let that put you off. We'll brighten up in a minute.

It begins with a chat with Jack Beasly, garden authority, philosopher and gentleman. Jack has in the works an article asking the question "What Is a Garden?" that will appear Saturday in these pages and that you won't want to miss. Since there are almost as many answers to the question as there are gardeners it may possibly run to encyclopedic length.

That is all I will say about it, not to steal Jack's thunder, but it started me brooding about the garden in my life and the wee house in my life and everything else in my life that count as possessions and demand the discipline of care-taking.

We now have, for example, an enormous stretch of lawn, a possession created heretofore, all but single-handedly, by my wife who took a sort of unkempt meadow, had it aerated, had it fertilized, had it de-weeded and caused a miracle to be wrought. My wife is proud of this. I am proud of my wife. But that garden somehow has become a culture muttering on my shoulder.

Time was, in that first moment of awakening, when I might contemplate the day ahead with anticipation, eager for what might come. Now, when I awake, my mind is filled with the roar of that lawn growing, growing, threatening to run amok, to return at any moment to its original chaos, unless I get out there and beat it back. The lawn is threatening, that's what it is. When it was just meadow I might lie in it or wedge some golf balls across it. Now I'm employed by it.

Possessions seem to have this effect nine times out of 10. The moment you acquire them they acquire you. Say, for example, that you decide to keep chickens, as I did. You do this so that the chickens will work for you, providing you with eggs. It takes but a single day to discover that you are working for the chickens and that the chickens, who only lay eggs, have by far the best of the deal — in dignity, effort and man-or-chicken-hours.

The hunger for possessions may reflect the appetite of the wife or the husband, but mainly it comes from acquiring each other. The honeymoon is seldom over before most couples are fully launched into a lifetime of getting the hardware of domesticity, the vast midden of artifacts and assorted junk that accumulate during every married life.

Our own long record of accumulation has been complicated by the kind of homes that we have owned with truly manic regularity. My wife has said, "We don't buy a house, we adopt one, like taking in an orphan" and that is the way it has been.

Whether this originally reflected my wife's taste or mine is lost in the mists of our marriage, but somewhere along the line our concept of what a house should be fused and embarked on to 30-odd years of painting, plastering, plumbing and the allied building trades.

What we demand in a house is something indefinable called "character." In practice that means, first, that the house must be old, that it must be far too enormous or far too small, that it must be in the last stages of wet or dry rot, that it must be the kind of decrepit house no one else in his right mind would dream of owning. Put an ad in the paper for any condemned cottage. Label it "Handyman's Special." You will find us whimpering at your door, cheque book in hand.

The curse of our lives has been that we are able to look at such a house, a house designed by a five-year-old child with a crayon, and we are hooked. We see only the house that will be when the hand-cut shakes are on the roof, when 800 gallons of white latex, at $13 per gallon, have covered its pitted blemishes, when a sun deck is put across its front. Look for any job-sided, canted monstrosity in the western world that has a new shake roof, a new skin of paint and a sun deck, like a little old lady gone berserk with Max Factor. That will be a Scott house.

We must surely be the only surviving couple who have never once moved into a house without immediately taking to the ladders. Lord love us, we're at it right this minute, painting the Rumpelstiltskin box out Methosin-way that we just had to have or life wouldn't be worth living.

I admit, of course, to moments of doubt. Indeed, only yesterday, clinging to the eaves, white latex cascading down my arm, I vowed, "One day we'll give up this life and buy a tent." To which my wife, sighing, replied, "If we bought a tent we'd paint it."

Is there an alternative to this familiar tyranny of possessions? I often wonder. Sometimes when I pick up the young hitch-hikers headed out to the Jordan River country, their entire worldly goods in a knapsack on their back, totally uninhibited by the panicky need to keep a step ahead of growing grass or termites in the woodwork, I wonder if maybe we shouldn't be going that unencumbered way, too, before it is too late, before the lawn and the house and the rest swallow us whole.

But, sure as you're born, there'd be some rotten little old run-down wreck of a place at Jordan River, a place thirsting for paint, a place with a tangled undergrowth that might make a lawn, and there we'd go again.

MOTORIST KILLED

One person was killed in the crash of a car and a defence department truck in the 700 block of Admirals Road at 10:30 a.m. today.

The victim was the car driver, who was not identified, pending notification of relatives.

Esquimalt Police said the car being driven north met the semi-trailer truck about the centre line of Admirals. Its driver was the sole occupant. At least one other person was with the truck driver.

Damage to the semi-trailer was light, and the car was wrecked.

Water Board Tax 'Unjust'

Greater Victoria Water Board will make another approach to the provincial government in an effort to get some relief from the tax against the district's watershed logging operations.

Board members agreed today that the submission should stress the inequities of the 15 per cent logging tax as it affects the water district and logging companies.

Water commissioner Ron Upward said the tax was imposed last year for logging done on the 33,000-acre watershed and the district paid it retroactively for the period back to 1970.

But he pointed out that because logging companies are profit-making organizations they can recover two-thirds through federal income tax deductions, so that they effectively pay only about five per cent.

The money which the board makes from its logging operations — $138,000 last year — used to offset losses from the sale of water.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances El-

ford recalled that the board made representations to the provincial cabinet last fall, but added: "There would be no harm in approaching the province and pointing out this inequity and asking them to reconsider the amount of tax we pay."

Saanich Ald. William Noel agreed the levy should not go unchallenged. He pointed out that Saanich had scored a minor victory over B.C. Hydro by "hammering away" at the utility on the question of putting transmission lines underground.

In other business, the board accepted a $107,864 tender from W. Campbell Limited for construction of a half-million gallon reservoir on Otter Point Road in the Sooke area.

The tank will serve three purposes. It will provide fire protection, act as an emergency supply if there are disruptions to the distribution system and allow up to two days of repairs on the 55-year-old, 18-mile line between Sooke Lake and Sooke Har-

The embattled Damien Society, which has been providing methadone treatment for about 60 Victoria narcotics addicts, has lost its last hope for support from the federal government and will close today.

Dr. Jack Patterson, society director, made the announcement at his home Tuesday evening and predicted that crime in Victoria would increase when the addicts' source of methadone is cut off.

"There will be a crime wave like you never saw before in Victoria," Patterson warned.

The society has been involved in controversy almost from its inception last November and its troubles started to peak a month ago when it was refused a provincial charter "because it would not be in the public interest."

Following the provincial refusal, Patterson flew to Ottawa for consultation with federal officials of the non-medical use of drugs directorate.

"I was hoping to get a federal charter which would have allowed me also to qualify for a federal grant with which to meet operating expenses," Patterson said.

But Tuesday night a dejected Patterson said he had received word from federal authorities that he would not be granted a federal charter.

"All along they have shown sympathy to me but I am told that they don't want to get into a fight with the province," Patterson said.

Today the society's Douglas Street offices had been vacated and were under renovation for use as a general insurance office.

The refusal of a charter to the society forces its closure because of new federal legislation which takes effect June 1. The legislation requires that only doctors or clinics with special federal permission be allowed to prescribe methadone to addicts.

The only such clinic in Victoria is the Narcotic Addiction Rehabilitation Centre (NARC) which is headed by Dr. James Laing and backed by the Victoria Medical Association. It is a satellite unit of the B.C. Narcotics Addiction Foundation which is backed by federal and provincial grants. There are four such clinics operating in the province.

However, Dr. Gordon Lott, president of the Victoria Medical Association, said that many of the addicts being treated at the Damien Society could be accommodated by NARC.

"We foresaw a month ago that there would be a sharp increase in the demand on Dr. Laing's clinic after June 1," Lott said.

"We approached Denholme (Douglas Denholme, Executive Director of the NAF) and he felt that Dr. Laing's existing plant would be sufficient to double his present intake with the addition of one staff member—a paramedical type of person," Lott said.

"That is what is going to happen and beyond that, if there proves to be additional need, we will have to wait and see. You can understand that the drug addict population is one that is highly transitory—it is hard to tell how many there really are," he added.

City Leads Poisonings

By DON VIPOND

A provincial summary shows Greater Victoria led all health districts in British Columbia last year in recorded poisoning cases.

Dr. A. A. Larsen, provincial epidemiologist, said today one likely reason is a better system locally for reporting cases.

Another factor may be a higher proportion of elderly people who sometimes forget they have taken their medicine and end up taking it twice.

The review summarizes information sent in by hospitals throughout B.C. It shows 1,037 poisoning cases dealt with in Greater Victoria during 1971.

The Greater Vancouver health district, with several times the population, recorded 810. But Larsen said the emergency department at Vancouver General Hospital is so busy it's suspected quite a number of poisoning cases go unreported.

The report is not specific in separating accidental poisonings from suicide attempts because many times it's impossible to find out.

"But when you get into teen age and adult cases, I find it hard to believe in most incidents it was accidental."

In Greater Victoria last year hospitals reported 417 cases involving one to four-year-olds, 361 poisonings among people 20 to 59 years old, 117 among 15 to 19-year-olds, 117 among 15 to 19-year-olds, 60 or over.

With youngsters, it's mostly a case of them getting into the cupboard under the kitchen sink or in the bathroom or at the shelves in the garage, all favorite places for storing poisonous substances.

Most of the 907 cases of aspirin poisoning B.C. hospital recorded last year were in the under 5 age group. But there were 156 aspirin cases involving people 15 to 24.

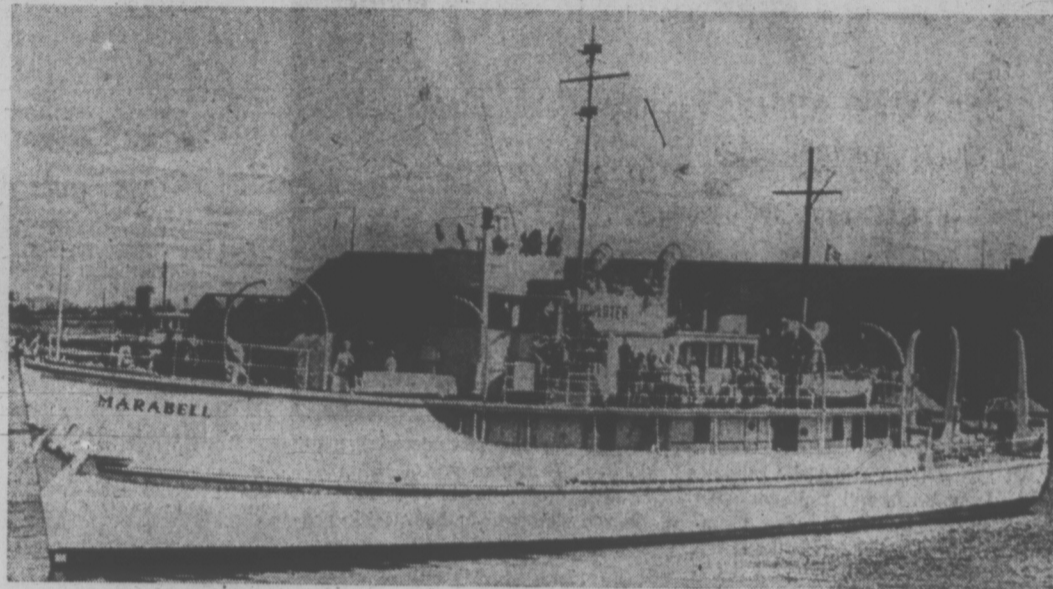

Where poisonings were by drugs affecting the central nervous system, there were 955 cases involving tranquilizers, 651 involving barbiturates, 390 involving other sedatives and hypnotics and 193 involving narcotics, including heroin and morphine.

Narcotic poisonings were concentrated in those 15 or older but there were 17 cases among two-year-olds.

Mood-changing drugs produced 311 cases, including 244 involving LSD, mostly 15 to 24-year-olds.

Bleaches proved the most dangerous of household cleaning and polishing agents, producing 73 poisoning cases during 1971.

The report, dealing with 6,612 poisoning cases, classifies 2,273 of them as other than accidental and among these, women outnumbered men two to one.

Marabell's off on a new career, this time as a charter vessel

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

One of the grand old ladies of the waterfront is back in harness again as a charter ship after being "in mothballs" since 1969.

She's the 136-foot Marabell, who first began her sea-going career as the American minesweeper YMS 9 in 1943.

Life became a little more frivolous for her in 1948 when she became a millionaire's plaything, being converted into a private yacht for the heir of the Dr. Ballard dog-biscuit company.

It was down to business again in 1953 when she underwent another conversion and became a hydrographic survey vessel, plying these waters until 1969. She was replaced with the CSS Parizeau and the CSS Vector.

HE FELL

Was love at first sight when Claude Lacerte spied her lying forlornly alongside at the McKay-Cormack shipyard.

Lacerte and his wife, Pauline, hail from Trois Rivieres, Que. Since he was 14, Lacerte has been involved with boats.

His first was a 15-foot dinghy which he and a chum built one winter. Her sails and the two boys' matching sailor suits were sewn by Lacerte's mother.

That boat was the first of many for Lacerte, including a 65-foot schooner which he sailed to the Virgin Islands.

Not that he was entirely boatless when he met Marabell. He was then a lieutenant serving in the destroyer-escort HMCS Columbia.

"But that was nothing compared to having my own command," he says.

HAUNTED

The memory of Marabell haunted him even when he was on sea duty.

The tug tightened and in October, when the Columbia was in Alaska, the decision was made.

He phoned from Alaska and Marabell was his.

Now he's out of the navy and Marabell, gleaming with paint, is back in action.

Guests mounting Marabell's gangplank almost expect to be piped aboard in true naval style. Small wonder — three of her five-man crew are Lacerre's old shipmates aboard Columbia.

They are her first mate, Michael Norris, the "buffer" (chief bosun's mate), Corey Mackay and engineer Gary Wright.

HEARD CALL

The only non-navy type aboard is the ship's boy, Patrick Jordan, 16, lured here from Quebec by the call of the sea.

Marabell's first cruise as a charter ship, appropriately enough, was a trip to Seattle with Lacerte's Columbia pals and their wives as passengers.

This morning she slipped from her berth at the CPR dock in the Inner Harbor. This time her manifest listed a group of senior citizens, being treated to a sea trip by Unit 12 of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans.

Watching her nose out to sea, she looked every bit as sprightly as when she was a millionaire's darling.

Viewer Of Nude No Prude

Plenty of nameless people march across the pages of the Times, part of the background in news pictures.

Occasionally they return. Last week, for example, the camera of photographer Bill Halkett caught a woman eyeing sidewalk paintings along Yates Street.

And the painting holding her attention was a nude.

The writer of the lines beneath the picture noted the watcher's face was hidden so there was no way of knowing whether she approved or not. In Victoria, one wonders.

Now we know.

Georgina Harrison wrote to the Times to explain.

As a former physiotherapist, she said, she was inspecting to see if the proportions of the named young lady were correct. They were.

"I agree with your implication that Victoria is rather conservative... I hope we shall read no more of B.C. judges condemning Donkhorst... for nude parading."

She is glad to read that thousands in the U.S. are now basking nude without being bothered by police.

"I think beauty competitions would be fairer and healthier if the contestants did not parade in high heels and wired bras."

Proportionately Perfect!
